Hi Peter,

The error you may have received should be fixed by now. The Employment Type incident/claim is a work in progress and we will be fixing these issues as we build it out.

As for the new Financial Categories, we need Origami support for creating them and it will not be done by Monday. Could you use the same process you were using before for processing these claims for the next 2 weeks while we build out the Employment Type capability in ERisk?

The specific payment and settlement modules for Employment Type claims are relatively new to ERisk and will help to have some requirements documentation for them. Examples are the new Financial Categories. Will help to have a short Teams session to brainstorm the requirements. It will help to build a comprehensive payment/settlement module rather than be reactive with Support Tickets.

Let us know if you open to have a meeting this afternoon to discuss the payment/settlement requirements or any other issues you are encountering while testing the Employment Type claims.

Thanks,
Sanjay

Mike –

I converted a GL claim to the new EP claim captured above starting with the incident and the process worked well. I understand your busy with rearranging fields, etc. but I was hoping you could add new financial buckets (categories) to the Current Financial panel under Other and Legal to allow us to be specific with our payments.

+Other (sub-categories)

- lost wages, annual leave, and sick leave

- pre judgment interest
- liquidated damages
- post judgment interest

+Legal

- Attorney Fees

We need to forward a portion of this claim (prejudgment and liquidated damages) for processing on Monday and would like to delineate payment types.

Thank you,

Peter

Mike –

I converted a GL claim to the new EP claim captured above starting with the incident and the process worked well. I understand your busy with rearranging fields, etc. but I was hoping you could add new financial buckets (categories) to the Current Financial panel under Other and Legal to allow us to be specific with our payments.

+Other (sub-categories)

- lost wages, annual leave, and sick leave

- pre judgment interest
- liquidated damages
- post judgment interest

+Legal

- Attorney Fees

We need to forward a portion of this claim (prejudgment and liquidated damages) for processing on Monday and would like to delineate payment types.

Thank you,

Peter

Hi Peter,

The error you may have received should be fixed by now. The Employment Type incident/claim is a work in progress and we will be fixing these issues as we build it out.

As for the new Financial Categories, we need Origami support for creating them and it will not be done by Monday. Could you use the same process you were using before for processing these claims for the next 2 weeks while we build out the Employment Type capability in ERisk? The specific payment and settlement modules for Employment Type claims are relatively new to ERisk and will help to have some requirements documentation for them. Examples are the new Financial Categories. Will help to have a short Teams session to brainstorm the requirements. It will help to build a comprehensive payment/settlement module rather than be reactive with Support Tickets.

Let us know if you open to have a meeting this afternoon to discuss the payment/settlement requirements or any other issues you are encountering while testing the Employment Type claims.

Thanks,

Sanjay

Letter from the Mayor

Dear Washingtonians,

As we get ready to welcome 2021 and the hope it brings with it, I want to invite you to join me tomorrow for a citywide, socially distanced 5K. Each year, the Fresh Start 5K is one of my favorite activities — an opportunity to start the year off right, have fun with neighbors from all eight wards, and remind yourself of the potential a new year brings. And while we can't run or walk together this year, that doesn't mean we can't accomplish the same goals separately.

In fact, 2020 taught us well how much we can accomplish together even when we are physically separated. All year, we have been rooting for each other from afar. We have cheered for health care workers from our homes. Protected vulnerable neighbors from our living rooms. And visited with family and friends through FaceTimes and Zooms.

We enter 2021 still carrying the uncertainty of 2020, but hopeful that a safe and effective vaccine is here. 2020 was about working together to stop the spread of the virus and protect our community. 2021 will be about finally ending this pandemic.

Please stay home and stay safe tonight. Continue to support local restaurants and businesses. And tomorrow, if you are able to, pick a spot in your neighborhood and kick off the New Year with a Fresh Start 5K.

Happy New Year, DC. I look forward to our comeback in 2021.

- COVID-19 Testing

Christmas Tree Collection

Holiday trees and greenery will be collected from homes that receive DPW curbside sanitation collection between January 11 and February 5, 2021.

Here is what residents should know:

- Collection for DPW-serviced households. Residents who receive curbside collection service from DPW should leave items where and when they set out their trash. Households not serviced by DPW (for example, apartment buildings) should consult with their landlord/property owner for collection procedures.
- No appointments required. This year, DPW will collect holiday trees from the normal point of collection on trash day.

- Remove decorations. When setting these items out for collection, residents should remove all ornaments and lights. Do not put the trees and greenery in a bag.
- Trees become free compost for residents. Trees and greenery collected through February 5 will be composted. District residents can collect up to five 32-gallon bags of the free compost year-round while supplies last at the Fort Totten Transfer Station. Residents must bring their own bags.
- Composting not guaranteed after February 5. After that date, residents can still place holiday trees and greenery where their trash is collected; however, composting is not guaranteed. The items will be picked up with the trash as space in DPW trucks permits.
- How to find out a neighborhood's collection schedule. Residents can go to dpw.dc.gov and click on the holiday tree banner to see DPW's trash schedule.
- Steps if holiday tree and/or greenery was not collected. Call 311 to create a "Christmas Tree Removal - Seasonal" service request.

For more information on recycling this holiday season, visit zerowaste.dc.gov.

DC Health Care Workers Can Make an Appointment to Get Vaccinated

This week, DC Health launched a portal for workers in health care settings in the District to make an appointment to get vaccinated. At this time, the portal, which can be accessed through coronavirus.dc.gov/vaccinatedc, is only for workers in health care settings that have direct or indirect exposure to infectious materials and cannot telework. When registering, workers will need to attest that they work in such a setting and then present verification at the time of their appointment.

The portal should only be used by workers who are in the Phase 1a population group.

Back to Top

COVID-19 Testing

Residents who have traveled should follow the District's travel advisory and either:

- Limit your daily activities for 14 days and monitor yourself for symptoms or

- Limit your daily activities, get tested 3 to 5 days after your return, and then limit your activities and self-monitor until you receive a negative test result

Residents who have symptoms or believe they were exposed to COVID-19 should stay home and contact their health care provider. Those who cannot get tested through their doctor should go to a public testing site. Individuals concerned about possible exposure should wait 3 to 5 days after exposure to get tested (getting tested too early increases the likelihood of receiving a "false negative" - meaning your results come back negative even though you are infected with the virus).

While public testing sites will be closed on Friday, January 1, the sites will reopen on Saturday, January 2 and four firehouse testing sites will be open on Sunday, January 3. Learn more about getting tested at coronavirus.dc.gov/testing

Mike –

I converted a GL claim to the new EP claim captured above starting with the incident and the process worked well. I understand your busy with rearranging fields, etc. but I was hoping you could add new financial buckets (categories) to the Current Financial panel under Other and Legal to allow us to be specific with our payments.

+Other (sub-categories)

- lost wages, annual leave, and sick leave
- pre judgment interest
- liquidated damages

- post judgment interest

+Legal

- Attorney Fees

We need to forward a portion of this claim (prejudgment and liquidated damages) for processing on Monday and would like to delineate payment types.

Thank you,

Peter

Letter from the Mayor

Dear Washingtonians,

As we get ready to welcome 2021 and the hope it brings with it, I want to invite you to join me tomorrow for a citywide, socially distanced 5K. Each year, the Fresh Start 5K is one of my favorite activities — an opportunity to start the year off right, have fun with neighbors from all eight wards, and remind yourself of the potential a new year brings. And while we can't run or walk together this year, that doesn't mean we can't accomplish the same goals separately.

In fact, 2020 taught us well how much we can accomplish together even when we are physically separated. All year, we have been rooting for each other from afar. We have cheered for health care workers from our homes. Protected vulnerable neighbors from our living rooms. And visited with family and friends through FaceTimes and Zooms.

We enter 2021 still carrying the uncertainty of 2020, but hopeful that a safe and effective vaccine is here. 2020 was about working together to stop the spread of the virus and protect our community. 2021 will be about finally ending this pandemic.

Please stay home and stay safe tonight. Continue to support local restaurants and businesses. And tomorrow, if you are able to, pick a spot in your neighborhood and kick off the New Year with a

Christmas Tree Collection

Holiday trees and greenery will be collected from homes that receive DPW curbside sanitation collection between January 11 and February 5, 2021.

Here is what residents should know:

- Collection for DPW-serviced households. Residents who receive curbside collection service from DPW should leave items where and when they set out their trash. Households not serviced by DPW (for example, apartment buildings) should consult with their landlord/property owner for collection procedures.

- No appointments required. This year, DPW will collect holiday trees from the normal point of collection on trash day.
- Remove decorations. When setting these items out for collection, residents should remove all ornaments and lights. Do not put the trees and greenery in a bag.
- Trees become free compost for residents. Trees and greenery collected through February 5 will be composted. District residents can collect up to five 32-gallon bags of the free compost year-round while supplies last at the Fort Totten Transfer Station. Residents must bring their own bags.
- Composting not guaranteed after February 5. After that date, residents can still place holiday trees and greenery where their trash is collected; however, composting is not guaranteed. The items will be picked up with the trash as space in DPW trucks permits.
- How to find out a neighborhood's collection schedule. Residents can go to dpw.dc.gov and click on the holiday tree banner to see DPW's trash schedule.
- Steps if holiday tree and/or greenery was not collected. Call 311 to create a "Christmas Tree Removal - Seasonal" service request.

DC Health Care Workers Can Make an Appointment to Get Vaccinated

This week, DC Health launched a portal for workers in health care settings in the District to make an appointment to get vaccinated. At this time, the portal, which can be accessed through coronavirus.dc.gov/vaccinatedc, is only for workers in health care settings that have direct or indirect exposure to infectious materials and cannot telework. When registering, workers will need to attest that they work in such a setting and then present verification at the time of their appointment.

COVID-19 Testing

Residents who have traveled should follow the District's travel advisory and either:

- Limit your daily activities for 14 days and monitor yourself for symptoms

or

- Limit your daily activities, get tested 3 to 5 days after your return, and then limit your activities and self-monitor until you receive a negative test result

Residents who have symptoms or believe they were exposed to COVID-19 should stay home and contact their health care provider. Those who cannot get tested through their doctor should go to a public testing site. Individuals concerned about possible exposure should wait 3 to 5 days after exposure to get tested (getting tested too early increases the likelihood of receiving a "false negative" - meaning your results come back negative even though you are infected with the virus).

While public testing sites will be closed on Friday, January 1, the sites will reopen on Saturday, January 2 and four firehouse testing sites will be open on Sunday, January 3. Learn more about getting tested at coronavirus.dc.gov/testing

Hello Chris,

Please see the response below:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s). Yes
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? There is video surveillance camera in the newer additions to the fleet If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? We are currently working through this component as a part of a of larger system enhancement. Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving? For fleet vehicles, vehicles are signed in/out daily for each user. For school buses, keys are stored on the active fleet and locked for fleet not in use.

- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of? No.

We will send copies of the contracts as soon as possible. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Best Regards,

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

*Chris Vass
Management Analyst

- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

Hello Chris,

Please see the response below:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s). Yes
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? There is video surveillance camera in the newer additions to the fleet. If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? We are currently working through this component as a part of a larger system enhancement. Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving? For fleet vehicles, vehicles are signed in/out daily for each user. For school buses, keys are stored on the active fleet and locked for fleet not in use.
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of? No.

We will send copies of the contracts as soon as possible. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

Subject: District Agency Costs for GPS and the Driver Safety Program (OSSE)

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

*Chris Vass

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).

- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

*Chris Vass
Management Analyst

December 28th, 2020

***

Mission Support & Modified Operations Section | Jay Melder, Section Chief

MODIFIED GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS | Joey Breems, Branch Chief

Front Burners & Flags

- Staff that are not required to be in office spaces or duty stations for operational reasons are being asked to telework from December 23 at 10pm to 5am on January 15, 2021, pursuant to Mayor's Order 2020-127.
- Due to positive cases and staff quarantines, meal service at Bancroft Elementary School is suspended; families are being directed to the Columbia Heights Education Campus (0.5 miles away). CARE programming will resume on 1/11 rather than 1/4.

2-534(e)

Movements, Operating Changes, and Agency Needs

- DHS received approval to ready Langdon Recreation Center for additional hypothermia shelter capacity.
- DYRS approved to implement temperature screening kiosks to better systematize point-of-entry processes and relieve budget and staffing strain.
- DCHR communicated extension of COVID sick leave, caregiving leave and childcare leave, until 3/31/2021.
- Pursuant to Mayor's Oder 2020-127, from December 23 at 10pm to 5am on January 15, 2021:
  - DCPL is pausing any indoor services at libraries, including computer access
  - DPR is only offering reservations for individual swim and fitness room sessions
  - The DC Circulator will suspend the national mall circulator route
- Agencies continue to prepare spaces for additional employees to return, including building readiness and PPE, but are pausing on returning any additional employees at this time
- DCPS has modified meal distribution schedule over the December holiday break. Only 20 sites will be open on 12/29 and 12/30; however, DCPS will still be supplied to deliver same total number of meals. Sites will be closed on 12/31-1/1. In previous years, DCPS distributed additional meals before the break started, and no meals were provided during the holiday break period.

What's Around the Corner

- MSMGO continues to monitor rise in cases at several agencies, including DYRS, DBH, DC Water, FEMS, MPD, and DPR

PERSONNEL FLAGS

(i.e increased COVID numbers, increased quarantining staff, or critical staffing shortages)

| Agency | Flag  |
|--------|---|
| DCPS   | Of the 11 new cases at DCPS, 4-5 staff members were working at Bancroft Elementary School, leading to a closure of the meal program at Bancroft and a delay in restarting the CARES program.                          |
| MPD    | MPD indicates that there are an additional 26 reported cases from 12/21 to 12/28; 93 officers are quarantining. Positive cases are attributed to recent protests. Operations are not impacted.                        |
| DYRS   | DYRS reports 7 new cases since 12/21, and is retesting all staff.   |
| DBH    | DBH reports 29 new cases since 12/21 and indicates it's due to community spread, not workplace spread, and is the result of asymptomatic employees who are being detected during the course of their routine testing. |
| DPR    | DPR reports 7 new cases since 12/21. Spread has not been traced to workplace, and no operational issues are being reported.   |

Service Usage

The graphics below depict the number of online applications and calls received by the Department of Human Services (DHS).

Online Applications Received

The majority of applications filed continue to be for SNAP and there is a weekly cyclical trend in when the applications are filed. As of December 21, DHS has received a total of 59,538 applications from both the online and mobile portal.

Unique Online Applications

*UPDT* 12/29/2020. The online portal started accepting applications on April 1, 2020. Some of the online application data were not transferred to a reporting server, however the data as of 4/17 reflects all additional applications added to the server. Additionally on 5/12, it was discovered that the online application submission platform had triggered duplicate submissions for some applications from 4/23 onward. The data currently illustrates the true number of unique applicants.

Unique Applications by Benefit Type

*UPDT* 12/29/2020. The online portal started accepting applications on April 1, 2020. A single application can be used to apply for more than one type of benefit. The number of online applications includes applications submitted through the DHS mobile app that launched on 6/17/20.

Call Center Calls

From December 22 to December 24, there was a 61% decrease in the number of calls to the call center. The abandonment rate is currently 3% for the call center. On December 23, the wait time for the call center was 7 minutes, a 3 minute increase from the day before. Effective August 28, the P-EBT call center has been closed.

Call Center Calls

*UPDT* 12/29/2020. Weekends are omitted, as the call center is closed. DHS has been operating another temporary call center to implement the P-EBT (Pandemic-Electronic Benefit Transfer) program, which provides food benefits for school children receiving free or reduced meals during the school year, who are not able to get lunch during school closure, in partnership with OSSE and LEAs since May 20.

Wait Time

Isolation and Quarantine Facilities Usage

From December 26 to December 28, the occupancy rate of hotel rooms stayed below 53% and the number of individuals from the homelessness services system occupying ISAQ hotel rooms has been between 88 and 99. On December 28, 24 individuals entered ISAQ hotel rooms, a 13 person increase from the day before. No additional youth have entered the foster-care quarantine respite facility since September 14.

Telework Status, Overtime, & Contact Tracers

Number of Employees By Time Reporting Code and Pay Period End

This information provides data on agencies charging time against the situational telework and regular pay time reporting codes across 19 pay periods (represented by pay period end date). Several agencies do not report their time through PeopleSoft, such as MPD, FEMS, DOC, and QSSSE DOT.

From the pay period ending 11/21 to the pay period ending 12/5, the number of employees charging situational telework held steady, the number of employees charging both regular and situational telework decreased by 4%, and the number of employees charging regular time decreased by 2%.

NOTE: The number of overall employees decreased from 7/4 to 7/18 due to fewer teachers reporting time in PeopleSoft as the end of the school year took effect; similarly, the number of overall employees increased from 8/15 to 8/29 as the beginning of the school year took effect.

Technology Usage

The graphics below depict the number of District employees using essential District hardware and software each day. The data below includes the number of District government computers turned on each day, the number of users logging on to the District government's virtual private network (VPN), and the number and type of IT help requests submitted.

Network/Systems Usage and Digital Activity

From the week of December 13 to the week of December 20, the weekly average of turned-on (or left-on) computers for both non-DCPS (DC) and DCPS employees decreased by 11% and 35%, respectively. During the same time frame, the weekly average of unique VPN users increased by 4%.

Key Systems and Platforms

Requests relating to DCPS support accounted for approximately 20% of all OCTOhelps tickets within the past two weeks. From the week of December 6 to the week of December 13, total Remedy tickets decreased by 12%. Data for the week December 20 is not present because it does not represent a full week's worth of data.

*UPDT* 12/29/2020

*UPDT* 12/23/20. The week of November 29 does not represent a full week's worth of data, which explains the substantial decrease in tickets from the prior week. The full week's data for Sunday - Saturday will be featured in the December 28 dashboard.

Employees can seek assistance from OCTO in two ways, 1) calling OCTOhelps and 2) creating a ticket in the Remedy system. The charts above depict the top 5 most frequent technology issues experienced by users in both systems. DBH, DHS, MPD, and DCPS have their own OCTOhelps number to contact, and these categories encompass all IT issues experienced by these four agencies.

Facilities

Energy Usage

Non-meal Schools Energy Usage

This data represents 54 closed schools that are confirmed non-meal sites. However, as of mid-June 2020 all schools have been powered up. Any year-over-year savings from mid-June onwards cannot be directly attributed to closed schools (due to COVID-19), but a combination of seasonality and continued distance learning.

Attachments: OHR FY19 Language Access Report.pdf

Dear Colleagues,

The Office of Human Rights (OHR) is pleased to announce the release of the FY19 Language Access Annual Compliance Report. This report is the annual performance document created by OHR's Language Access Program that is released publicly and to Council members. It includes programmatic initiatives, statistics on foreign-born and limited and non-English proficient (LEP/NEP) populations in the District, number of complaints filed against District agencies under the DC Language Access Act of 2004, and compliance scorecards that detail the performance of over 30 District government agencies that are covered entities or have major public contact.

Due to the pandemic, this report has been delayed in its release by several months. While it is now publicly available, I am sending it directly to you because the past ten months has highlighted the critical nature of Language Access and the importance it serves in sharing vital, life-saving information to linguistically diverse communities in the District.

Thank you and your agency Language Access Coordinators and teams for your continued efforts to equitable access and service to our city's limited and non-English proficient residents and communities. We look forward to working with you in 2021 and maintaining the District's position as a leading jurisdiction in this work.

Wishing you a very happy new year.

note from Language Access Program team

Dear Stakeholders, Partners and DC Residents,

The DC Office of Human Rights (OHR) is proud to publish the Language Access Annual Compliance Report for FY19, prepared by the Language Access Program (LAP) team during the extraordinary coronavirus pandemic. The LAP team firmly believes that more than ever, the District of Columbia must ensure it meets the needs of our city's most vulnerable populations, particularly residents who face language barriers in accessing their rights to government services.

This report reiterates the District's commitment to give all residents equal access to vital government services, documents and programs no matter what language they speak or their level of English proficiency. That commitment was made 16 years ago when the DC Council unanimously passed the Language Access Act. Passing the Language Access Act made DC one of the most inclusive cities in the country. As stewards of that legislation, OHR's Language Access Program's mission is to eliminate linguistic barriers and ensure all District agencies have the tools, capacity and technical knowledge to serve Limited and Non-English Proficient (LEP/NEP) workers, business owners and residents which now represent 30.8% of the foreign-born population and 5.6% of all ages 5 and older in the District. Close to 100,000 foreign-born residents call the District their home today, and city agencies continue to improve how they serve their linguistically diverse customers by offering interpretation services, translating vital documents and posting it to their websites and displaying multilingual signage and videos in public areas. During this world health crisis, as OHR's Language Access Program worked with its partners to produce multilingual public health notices, emergency texts and flyers in various languages for the District's LEP/NEP residents, it was clear the importance of ensuring inclusion.

This report includes compliance achievements and reporting for 38 covered entities with major public contact and 23 non-major public contact entities. The scorecards in this report provide detailed information on the agencies' language access compliance performance level of preparedness, accessibility and quality in serving clients. Also highlighted is data reported by agencies in FY19, such as 183,387 encounters with LEP/NEP customers across agencies; language access compliance training for 41,040 District government employees, including contractor and grantee staff; 73,277 calls made by frontline employees to reach a telephonic interpreter to communicate with customers speaking 66 different languages; and the translation of 830 vital documents by agencies with major public contact.

We are very excited about our continuing partnership with language access advocates, LEP/NEP community and government agencies and with great appreciation we thank you for being a part of our Language Access team. We acknowledge that we played no small role in fulfilling many of the LA goals and milestones in FY19 and FY20. We look forward to a long and fruitful relationship between government, and community to successfully accomplish more LA implementation projects together as we head into FY21.

Sincerely,

Rosa Carrillo, Director, Language Access Program

DC Language Access Act of 2004

The DC Language Access Act of 2004 requires all District government agencies, public-facing contractors and grantees to ensure that limited and non-English proficient (LEP/NEP) individuals access the full range of government services and receive translation and interpretation services. The Act further outlines requirements for covered entities and designates 39 agencies as covered entities with major public contact. It is the task of the Language Access Program to annually monitor and evaluate all covered entities. OHR's FY19 Annual Compliance Review provides individual scorecards for 38<sup>1</sup> covered entities with major public contact assessing their level of compliance with the Language Access Act and a compliance profile for 23 covered entities.

Language Access Program

OHR's Language Access Program is tasked with monitoring citywide compliance with the Language Access Act by providing central coordination and technical assistance to covered entities. The work of the program is organized in four areas:

ENFORCEMENT

Investigate language access complaints from individuals or organizations who believe that a covered entity has violated the Language Access Act; issue findings; and monitor implementation of corrective actions.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

Provide training, tools, and guidance on effective implementation of language access compliance requirements; and support the work of Language Access Coordinators and Language Access Point of Contacts.

COMPLIANCE MONITORING

Ensure that all 38 covered entities with major public contact develop attainable two-year plans, report quarterly and take appropriate steps to meet compliance requirements; annually assess covered entities' compliance with the Act's requirements.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

Provide "Know Your Rights" training and other public education and engagement opportunities to ensure that LEP/NEP individuals exercise their rights under the law.

OHR's mission is to eliminate linguistic barriers and ensure that all District agencies have the tools, capacity, and technical knowledge to serve linguistically diverse customers.

FY19 Language Access Program Highlights

In FY19, the Language Access Program worked extensively with agencies to support the goals of implementing language access requirements and improving overall compliance with the Language Access Act. The LAP provided training, technical assistance and individual consultation to Language Access Coordinators (LACs) and Language Access Points of Contact (LAPOCs), and also reached out to the District’s linguistically diverse/limited English proficient populations to educate them on their right to request language access services in city government offices.

TRAINING & TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

LANGUAGE ACCESS COMPLIANCE
trainings were delivered directly to 822 District employees, grantees and contractors.

LANGUAGE ACCESS AND CULTURAL COMPETENCY trainings were delivered through DCHR’s Center for Learning and Development.

BIMONTHLY TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE
sessions were hosted for LACs covering best practices for enhancing data collection and reporting; developing biennial language access plans and ensuring grantee and contractor compliance.

LANGUAGE ACCESS COMPLIANCE ORIENTATION
session was held for LAPOCs to provide guidance on language access implementation activities and annual reporting requirements.

15

MEETINGS were held with the Mayor’s Offices on African, Asian and Pacific Islander and Latino Affairs to coordinate technical assistance efforts.

DIGITAL LANGUAGE ACCESS SIGNAGE LAUNCH

In April, during the ceremony commemorating the passage of the DC Language Access Act, OHR's Language Access Program (LAP) unveiled the Digital Language Access Signage video promoting the District's interpretation services to limited English proficient (LEP) and non-English proficient (NEP) residents. The educational video explains how LEP/NEP residents can request language services and how agencies can culturally and linguistically serve such populations appropriately. The video was created in collaboration with the Mayor's three ethnic constituency offices and the Office of the Chief Technology Officer. A large number of agencies that have waiting and public facing areas in their agencies are maximizing the video.

LANGUAGE ACCESS ACT 15TH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

On April 24, 2019, the Language Access Program, along with DC government agencies, Language Access advocates and community members, celebrated the 15th anniversary of the passage of the Language Access Act of 2004. The unanimous passage of the act 15 years ago embodied the District of Columbia's pledge to support the city's vibrant immigrant population and ensure that all DC residents have equal access to government services, regardless of their native language or English language proficiency. The commemorative ceremony celebrated the work of DC government agencies that have excelled in providing language access services and in promoting language access rights awareness within the LEP/NEP community.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

OHR worked with community-based partners to engage diverse LEP/NEP communities and ensure that they know and exercise their right to language access services.

- 1,505 LEP/NEP residents were engaged and reached through workshops, "Know Your Rights" trainings and community events.
- OHR participated in 67 community events and meetings to share information on language access and distribute multilingual "Know Your Rights" and "I Speak" cards.
- 2,500 multilingual "I Speak" cards were distributed to LEP/NEP individuals.
- 13 trainings were offered to constituents, advocates, case managers and service providers covering language access protections that impact their clients and members.
- Through a collaborative effort between the Language Access program and the Ethiopian Community Center (ECC), 230 LEP/NEP African community members were educated on the provisions of the Language Access Act. The educational project aimed to increase language access awareness among Africans in DC and to improve their ability to communicate more effectively with government agencies and service providers.

Language Access Enforcement

The Office of Human Rights investigates language access public complaints filed by individuals who are denied their right to language assistance or who allege that a covered entity has violated the Language Access Act. Once OHR conducts a pre-investigation resolution intervention to ensure that complainants receive immediate services, public complaints are docketed and investigated before the OHR Director issues written findings. Agencies found in violation of the Language Access Act are required to implement corrective actions mandated by OHR.

In FY19, OHR received a total of 19 language access inquiries alleging violation of the Language Access Act:

- 5 were docketed and 4 are under investigation following a pre-investigation resolution process.
- 3 were resolved during the pre-investigation resolution process, and
- 10 were administratively dismissed based on lack of jurisdiction or failure to state a claim.
- 1 was withdrawn by the complainant

OHR issued a total of 1 determination in FY19:

- 1 was to the Metropolitan Police Department, which was found in non-compliance with the Language Access Act for failure to provide translation service.

Corrective Actions Meeting in FY19:

- 4 corrective action meetings were held with the Department of Motor Vehicles, Department of Human Services, Fire and Emergency Medical Service and the Metropolitan Police Department.
- 1 corrective action meeting was held with District of Columbia Public Schools and 1 with District of Columbia Housing Authority for noncompliance of inquiries resolved during the pre-investigation resolution process.

Through its partnership with the Equal Rights Center (ERC), OHR conducted 126 telephone and 111 in-person tests in FY19 to assess the accessibility of 17 covered entities with major public contact. ERC testers either visited or called these agencies and attempted to obtain information from frontline employees while speaking exclusively in one of seven non-English languages: Amharic, Arabic, Chinese (Mandarin), French, Korean, Spanish, and Vietnamese. The ERC provided the scores and narrative summaries of the test results for each agency, which OHR has incorporated into the agency compliance scorecards under the 'Quality' measure. The ERC also provided an analysis of all data collected from FY19 and FY18 tests to offer a comparative picture on observed trends and overall performance.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS:

- 64% of agencies tested in both years improved their interpretation rates from FY18 to FY19.
- At test sites tested in both years, overall interpretation rates were 10% higher in FY19 than they were in FY18. This was not a statistically significant improvement ( $p = .08186$ ) though the improvement in scores at these divisions was significant.
- At divisions tested in both years, interpretation rates decreased very slightly from 2019 to 2018 (from 84% to 83%) on in-person tests. However, interpretation rates for phone tests increased significantly from FY18 to FY19 (from 26% to 45%,  $p = .00438$ ), producing the overall net increase in interpretation rates.
- At all divisions, testers received language assistance in 78% of in-person tests, as compared to 88% in FY18, 86% in FY17, 92% in FY16, and 88% in FY15.
- At all divisions, testers received language assistance in 44% of telephone tests in FY19, as compared to 37% in FY18, of 57% in FY17, 43% in FY16 and 45% in FY15.
- Testers received interpretation through a telephonic interpretation service in 49% of tests and through a bilingual employee in 11% of tests.
- 30% or 39 of the 129 phone tests reached an automated voice menu. 12 of the 39 calls reached instructions in the tester's language, and 4 out of these 12 calls were then connected to a live employee.
- At test sites tested in FY19 and either in FY17 or FY18, testers reported seeing language access signage more frequently at test sites in FY19 than in the previous two years.
- 34% of tested locations displayed language access signage that was visible to all testers, 44% were visible to some testers, and 22% were visible to none of the testers.
- Testers received translated vital documents in their language in 13% of in-person tests conducted in FY19.

Stakeholder Highlights

Stakeholder Accomplishments

Section §1209 of the Language Access Act regulations designates the Mayor's Office on African Affairs (MOAA), the Mayor's Office on Asian and Pacific Islander Affairs (MOAPIA) and the Mayor's Office on Latino Affairs (MOLA) to serve as consultative bodies to assist OHR and District agencies in the implementation of the Language Access Act. The Act's regulations also names the DC Language Access Coalition (Coalition) as an external non-governmental body to consult on the implementation of the Act.

These entities have achieved the following outcomes in FY19 as part of their work to strengthen the District's compliance with the Language Access Act:

MAYOR'S OFFICE ON AFRICAN AFFAIRS

Quality Assurance

MOAA provided technical assistance to District government agencies in FY19 by reviewing more than 25 documents translated into African languages and by providing guidance as agencies worked to centralize translated vital documents on their websites. MOAA provided quality assurance reviews and technical assistance to the Department of Employment Services (DOES), Department of Human Services (DHS), District of Columbia Public Library (DCPL), Department on Disability Services (DDS), Department of For Hire-Vehicles (DFHV) and District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS). The following is a sample of the documents that were reviewed for quality: (DOES) FAQ Employer & Employee; (DCPS) Family Engagement Survey and Student Guide to Graduation; (DCPL) Library Card Registration form and Back to School Guide; (DDS) Agency Brochure; (DHS) PIT+ Survey 2019 and (DFHV) Open Season to Change DTS Providers.

Outreach to LEP/NEP Residents:

MOAA conducted outreach to engage linguistically diverse LEP/NEP residents in the African community to better connect them to government services and inform them of their language access rights. Through MOAA's outreach, the agency engaged more than 770 community members in events that included a language access Know Your Rights components such as Free Tax Preparation and Financial Inclusion; a Women in Tech in the African Diaspora Panel; an African Community Members vs MPD Soccer Tournament; an African Fashion Show; a Mental Health Discussion and the Dunbar Seniors Resource Fair. Notably, the agency also partnered with DHFV to engage DC's African cab drivers and provided language assistance and Know Your Rights information in Amharic and French.

MAYOR'S OFFICE ON ASIAN AND PACIFIC ISLANDER AFFAIRS

Cultural Competency Training

MOAPIA collaborated with OHR, MOAA and MOLA to develop and implement cultural competency trainings for the following agencies: Department of Motor Vehicles (11 sessions) and the Office of Peoples Counsel (1 session). The agency also provided three (3) stand-alone cultural competency trainings with the following agencies: Metropolitan Police Department (2 sessions), Department of Disability Services (2 sessions) and DC Human Resources (1 session).

Bilingual Outreach Specialists at DHS

MOAPIA continues to provide bilingual outreach specialists to the Department of Human Services' H Street and Taylor Street Service Centers. The outreach specialists provide language assistance to Chinese and Vietnamese constituents who want to access Medicare, Medicaid, DC Alliance, SNAP, Child Care Assistance and housing benefits programs. The bilingual specialists not only provide language support but also conduct door-to-door outreach. MOAPIA also worked closely with DHS to discuss the agency's system of tracking the cases of LEP/NEP residents and provided suggestions on more effective ways to serve Asian clients.

Bilingual Outreach

In FY19, MOAPIA assisted in 592 cases overseen by DHS. Of those cases, 310 involved Vietnamese-speaking residents and 282 involved Chinese-speaking constituents. Currently, MOAPIA continues its outreach to LEP/NEP constituents through a phone-banking campaign and social media. MOAPIA reached out to more than 900 residents and 90 small business owners who need language assistance and who can benefit from information such as Public Charge Rule, Medicaid Renewal and/or financial recovery programs.

Outreach to LEP/NEP Residents

In FY19, MOAPIA distributed more than 300 Know Your Rights "I Speak" cards at 30 outreach events that included a language access component.

Quality Assurance

MOAPIA provided technical assistance to District government agencies during FY19 by reviewing more than 82 documents translated into Asian languages. MOAPIA provided quality assurance reviews and technical assistance to the following agencies: Department of Employment Services (DOES), Department of Human Services (DHS), Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) and the District of Columbia Public Library (DCPL). The following is a sample of the documents that were reviewed: DC Paid Family Leave Employee Notice (DOES); Medicaid Renewal Fact Sheet (DHS); Rent Control Fact Sheet (DHCD) and Library Card Registration form (DCPL).

Language Access Signage

MOAPIA conducted Language Access site visits at multiple DC agencies that Asians and Pacific Islanders frequently visit to seek services, including the Department of Aging and Community Living (DACL), DC Health (DCH) and Department of Human Services (DHS). At the site visits, MOAPIA provided suggestions to several agencies regarding Language Access signage. If some agencies had Language Access signage or posters that were outdated or did not include every mandated language, especially Asian languages, MOAPIA recommended corrections to provide accurate information.

MAYOR'S OFFICE ON LATINO AFFAIRS

Language Access Monitoring

MOLA monitored, assisted and provided feedback to 37 District government agencies to ensure they implemented language access requirements and adopted best practices.

Bilingual Hiring

MOLA produced and disseminated bi-weekly bilingual job announcements to 10,000+ subscribers in the Latino community. Announcements included job openings in District government designed to increase the linguistic capacity of District agencies by connecting them with qualified bilingual candidates. The agency collaborated with DDOT to prepare Latino candidates for a Multicultural Employment Fair.

Language Access Lunch and Learn

During FY19, MOLA hosted 5 "Lunch & Learn" meetings for Language Access Coordinators and District government employees to share best practices on language access implementation and to address challenges government employees face in serving LEP/NEP customers.

Language Access Signage

MOLA worked with the DC Office of Cable Television, Film, Music and Entertainment and OHR to re-shoot the Language Access digital signage video to make it culturally appropriate. The video provides instructions for LEP/NEP customers who want to request interpretation services when visiting District government agencies.

Quality Assurance

MOLA provided technical assistance to District government agencies throughout FY19 by reviewing over 400 documents translated into Spanish and by providing guidance as agencies worked to centralize translated vital documents on their websites. MOLA provided quality assurance reviews and technical assistance to the DC Department of Transportation (DDOT), Office of People’s Counsel (OPC), DC Fire & Emergency Medical Services (FEMS), Department of Behavioral Health (DBH), Department of Disability Services (DDS), DC Public Library (DCPL), Child and Family Services Agency (CFSA), Department of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS), Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV), the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) and The Office of the Attorney General (OAG).

Outreach to LEP/NEP Residents

Cultural Competency Training

MOLA collaborated with OHR, MOAA and MOAPIA to develop and implement a cultural competency training for the Department of Motor Vehicles. The 11-session training was attended by 330 DMV employees. MOLA also collaborated with the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) to develop a cultural awareness video for MPD officers who interact with the District’s Latino population. MOLA also delivered a cultural competency training for MPD staff.

Capacity Building

MOLA provided interpretation equipment and support to grantees, DC government agencies and other community-based organizations to facilitate provision of interpretation services for LEP/NEP individuals.

DC LANGUAGE ACCESS COALITION

The DC Language Access Coalition is an alliance of diverse community based organizations and individuals advocating for language access rights within the District of Columbia. Currently hosted by Many Languages One Voice, the Coalition provides monitoring, evaluation, technical assistance, and community education on language access in the District, and initiates campaigns to ensure District government agencies are accountable to the Language Access Act.

In FY20, the Coalition will continue advocating for the District's underrepresented limited and non-English proficient individuals to ensure they have equal access and can participate fully in DC's public programs and benefits. The Coalition continues to strengthen its membership base and widen the scope of its outreach efforts to better engage partners and LEP/NEP communities in ongoing advocacy efforts.

Covered Entity Compliance Summary

Compliance Profile of Covered Entities

The DC Language Access Act requires all covered entities to provide interpretation and translation services, adopt a comprehensive language access policy, train public contact staff and meet signage and website accessibility requirements. Covered entities not designated as agencies with major public contact are required, by regulation, to a) appoint a Language Access Point of Contact (LAPOC) tasked with coordinating the agency's compliance efforts; b) attend a language access orientation every year; and c) submit an annual report detailing language access implementation efforts and encounters with LEP/NEP customers. The table [below] provides an assessment of 23 covered entities and their level of compliance with these requirements in FY19.

Covered Entities with Major Public Contact

ABOUT THE SCORECARDS:

This report features compliance scorecards for 38 District agencies with major public contact. Scorecards provide an overview of how accessible a covered entity with major public contact is to constituents who are limited and non-English proficient (LEP/NEP). Each scorecard includes a numeric evaluation, a narrative description of an agency's accomplishments, and recommendations for addressing gaps in compliance. The numeric evaluation provides an agency's overall compliance score based on three performance categories: preparedness, accessibility, and quality.

The category of preparedness evaluates the extent to which an agency has laid the necessary groundwork for interacting with LEP/NEP constituents, such as by collecting data on encounters and training frontline staff on language access requirements. The category of accessibility measures the current state of language access services at a given agency, including interpretation, translation, website accessibility and outreach. The category of quality reflects how well an agency is implementing its services with respect to customer experiences. Field test results and formal complaints filed against the agency are considered in this category.

To receive a perfect compliance score, an agency must fulfill all of the requirements under each of these three categories. Each requirement corresponds to one point, allowing for a maximum possible score of 14 for agencies that underwent field testing, and 12 for agencies that did not. Individual agency score per requirement is available in the compliance details table on page 36.

The agency's overall compliance score is based on three performance categories: preparedness, accessibility, and quality.

Alcoholic Beverage Regulation Administration

preparedness

In FY19, ABRA failed to meet preparedness requirements and must take immediate steps in FY20 to provide language access compliance training to public contact employees.

accessibility

In FY19, ABRA did not translate vital documents and did not take steps to enhance its website's accessibility to the LEP/NEP community. The agency did not make efforts to engage the LEP/NEP communities.

quality

The agency made a slight improvement in LA service provision testing. Only two of seven testers did not receive interpretation services in FY19. While no complaints were filed against ABRA in FY19, the agency did not meet reporting requirements.

Telephone Tests

2 out of 4 telephone tests provided interpretation service, information or appropriate resources.

In-Person Tests

3 out of 3 in-person tests provided interpretation service, information or appropriate resources.

FY19 Top Languages Encountered:

Spanish, Amharic, Korean, French and Tigrinya

FY19 Encounters: 32 | FY18 Encounters: 37 | FY18 Score: 6/14

The Alcoholic Beverage Regulation Administration (ABRA) met none of the prerequisites in the area of preparedness in FY19. The agency failed to report comprehensive data, and it still lacks an internal Language Access Policy. ABRA only reported two trainings, and it was unclear whether those sessions covered LA requirements. Also, based on ABRA's failure to confirm and a lack of comprehensive data, OHR's LA program cannot verify whether the agency has grantees/contractors.

In the area of accessibility, no vital documents were translated in FY19, and the language support page still is not posted on ABRA's website. The agency listed trainings at outreach events but, again, it is not clear whether the LEP/NEP community was present.

In the area of quality, language access field tests conducted at ABRA showed improvement in its response to non-English speakers seeking services. In FY19, five of seven testers were provided interpretation compared to only three of eight testers in FY18. Interpretation services were provided in two of four phone tests. All three in-person testers (Amharic, Korean and Spanish speakers) received interpretation services within an appropriate time frame. The Amharic and Korean-speaking testers received interpretation services through Language Line Solutions (LLS), and the Spanish-speaking tester received interpretation from a bilingual employee.

In FY20, OHR will continue to engage with and support ABRA with the goal of bringing the agency into compliance with the Language Access Act and its requirements. OHR strongly recommends the agency commit to fulfilling its duty as a public service provider that engages with the District's linguistically diverse business owners and LEP/NEP residents.

Child and Family Services Agency

preparedness

CFSA fulfilled planning and reporting requirements in FY19 and trained frontline employees and managers on language access compliance requirements.

accessibility

CFSA translated three vital documents into Spanish and Tigrinya. In FY19, CFSA also participated in 25 citywide community outreach events, a significant and commendable increase over the previous year.

No complaints were filed against CFSA in FY19. The agency was not tested in FY19. CFSA continues to make steady efforts toward meeting Language Access Act requirements.

FY18 Score

FY19 Encounters

FY19 Top Languages Encountered:

FY19 Top Languages Encountered: Spanish, Amharic, Tigrinya
Vietnamese, French, Mandarin, Haitian Creole, Oromo, Mongolian

FY18 Encounters: 1787

The Child and Family Services Agency (CFSA) has met four of five preparedness requirements by using two data tracking sources, and it had outstanding attendance at all LAC meetings. OHR looks forward to working with CFSA to update its LA policy, which was last revised in 2016. CFSA's FY19 language access implementation report indicates that the agency delivered nine language access compliance training sessions during the year.

In the area of accessibility, the agency participated in 25 outreach events throughout the city's eight wards. The agency also translated three documents: "Family Team Meetings", "Hearing Results" and "Notice of Investigation" into two languages: Spanish and Tigrinya in addition to confidential case-specific documents. Although the agency increased its numbers in translation there was a discrepancy on the website's Spanish language support page regarding the document titled "How to Become a Foster parent" the title is in English, making it inaccessible to the LEP/NEP community. OHR looks forward to advising CFSA on improving its website accessibility.

In the area of quality, no formal complaints were filed against CFSA, and the agency was a recipient of the "Consistent Agency" award for receiving a perfect score in field testing in 2016 and 2017. CFSA also ensured that as LACs transitioned out of the agency, there was a smooth transition between the outgoing and incoming LAC. CFSA also states that ongoing mandatory trainings help public contact employees serve LEP/NEP clients with a better understanding of their linguistic needs, whether the clients are encountered during visits to the agency, at family team meetings or during home visits.

OHR commends CFSA for adhering to OHR'S recommendations: to expand community engagement in partnership with the three constituency offices (MOLA, MOAPIA and MOAA). OHR recommends that CFSA continue its efforts to enhance its website accessibility by uploading translated documents to the appropriate language support page with the corresponding translated document title.

FY18 Encounters: 1,710 | FY18 Score: 8/12

While the Department of Aging and Community Living (DACL) successfully met planning and reporting requirements in FY19, the agency must make efforts in FY20 to address compliance shortfalls, such as updating its LA Policy and recommitting to attending the LAC bi-monthly meetings. OHR recommends the agency strengthen its data collection source by tracking bilingual staff encounters with LEP/NEP constituents. OHR strongly recommends that DACL train its staff starting with its frontline employees as the field test showed that staff is not prepared to engage LEP/NEP seniors or provide them with their right to services in their native language as required under the Language Access Act.

In FY19, DACL had one language access training session attended by 34 frontline staff and managers and translated one document into seven languages. However, the documents are not uploaded onto the language support section of DACL's website. OHR recommends that the agency to translate DACL's brochure, "Long-Term Care Guide," into the most frequently languages encountered by the agency and place links to all translated documents in the "Language Support" section of its website so they are fully accessible to the LEP/NEP community. DACL participated in 11 events to engage with LEP/NEP seniors in the Asian/Pacific Islander and Latino communities by participating, including the Mayor's Senior Town Hall meeting, Health Information Fair and the VIDA Senior Center Health Fair.

In FY19, DACL was tested by telephone and received a score of zero. None of the four testers - Amharic, Arabic, Korean and Vietnamese speakers- who called the DACL Ward 1 Senior Wellness Center received interpretation services and they reported that agency employees explicitly refused to provide interpretation.

In the area of preparedness, Fire and Emergency Medical Services (FEMS) has an updated Language Access policy. However, the agency must improve its data collection system to capture bilingual staff encounters with the LEP/NEP community. FEMS has maintained its commitment to preparedness by conducting 10 trainings, with four of those sessions dedicated to the interpretation waiver procedures. The agency has certified compliance of its grantees/contractors, however the LA team recommends the agency refine its certification verbiage to be specific about LA requirements.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated one document the "AMA Waiver" into six languages. OHR commends FEMS on fulfilling last year's compliance report recommendation to centralize all translated vital documents under the "language support" section of its website. In FY19, FEMS participated in four events with a team of certified bilingual staff and professional interpreters to ensure accessibility to the LEP/NEP participants.

In the area of quality, the agency currently has an outstanding corrective action from a non-compliance finding in FY17. The LA program urges FEMS to reach an agreement for the proposed corrective action plan in FY20. OHR encourages FEMS to enhance its outreach efforts and collaborate with the Mayor's Offices on African, Asian & Pacific Islander and Latino Affairs. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Health (DC Health) reported comprehensive data on language interpretation encounters with bilingual staff, on the telephone and in-person. OHR's Language Access Program strongly recommends the agency update and upload its LA Policy as previously recommended by the LA program. OHR also recommends the agency strengthen the verbiage of grantee certification to include LA requirements and procedures specifically in training, data collection and other areas. The agency has conducted some LA training but should increase the frequency of trainings per the Language Access Program protocols. The LA program looks forward to advising DC Health on its development of a digital LA training. In FY19, the LA program recognized DC Health with its "Most Improved" Award for boosting its annual compliance review score from 2/14 in FY16 to 11/14 in FY17 to 12/14 in FY18.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated 46 vital documents into nine languages, including the "DC Universal Health Certificate," "Give Your Family a Healthy Start Flyer," and "My School DC Immunization." However, the agency must ensure those documents are accessible to the LEP/NEP community by properly housing them under the language support pages of the DC Health website. The LA program commends the agency for collaborating with community-based health care providers to reach out to traditionally under-served residents and the LEP/NEP community. However, the agency must expand its outreach to the LEP/NEP community by collaborating with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices (MOAA, MOAPIA and MOLA).

In the area of quality, there were no LA public complaints filed against the agency. Also, in FY19, nine of 16 testers received interpretation service. DC Health divisions provided more consistent language access in-person than they did over the telephone. At DC Health facilities such as Andromeda, Upper Cardozo and Community Connection that were tested over multiple years, overall interpretation rates were better in FY19 than in previous years. But despite improvements at Upper Cardozo in FY19, all three facilities have struggled to provide interpretation over the telephone. In three years, only three of 20 telephone testers received interpretation at these facilities. OHR's LA program urges DC Health to take immediate steps to certify LA compliance of its funded grantees/contractors because field test results show only minimal improvement in providing language access services to the LEP/NEP community.

The District of Columbia Housing Authority (DCHA) showed improvement in the area of preparedness by strengthening data collection by including three sources of data for LEP/NEP encounters. OHR recommends that DCHA continue to work toward updating its internal Language Access policy, which was last revised in 2016. OHR also recommends that DCHA fulfill its plan to certify contractor compliance with the LA Act by including compliance verbiage in its MOUs and ensure LA compliance by training all public contact grantees/contractors. DCHA facilitated 14 LA compliance trainings for 619 of its staff members.

DCHA exhibited a slight improvement in the area of accessibility because of its increase in document translation. However, OHR strongly recommends the agency stop using "Google Translate" as its translation engine. Although the Google service can translate webpages, it is considered a liability to use this resource because there is no certainty about the quality or accuracy of the translated text. The agency improved its outreach to LEP/NEP individuals by participating in five events targeting the Asian, Latino and African immigrant communities.

In the area of quality, the agency dropped a point due to the filing of a formal complaint for failing to provide LA services to a client. In FY19, field test results showed that only 4 out of 13 testers who called DCHA received interpretation services. Testers who called the DCHA call center received LA services in two of four tests. Testers who called DCHA properties only received LA services in two of nine tests. At Claridge Towers, none of the employees who spoke to testers even attempted to provide interpretation services, and two testers—speaking Amharic and Vietnamese—reported that agency employees explicitly refused to provide interpretation.

Overall, FY19 test results indicate that the agency headquarters and DCHA properties continue to violate the Language Access Act by denying LEP/NEP residents their right to language assistance.

In FY19, the District of Columbia Public Library (DCPL) fully met preparedness requirements by submitting timely quarterly and annual reports. DCPL has an updated LA policy on file. Although DCPL's main training hub is under construction, DCPL ensured that new hires attended the language access compliance training through DCHR's Center for Learning and Development. OHR urges DCPL to institute a robust training plan to equip its frontline public contact staff to use language access resources. This staff should receive comprehensive LA training to improve in-person and telephonic testing and, ultimately, to improve customer service for its LEP/NEP constituents. DCPL also strengthened its partnership with OHR's LA Program by consistently attending bi-monthly meetings and maintaining open communication. DCPL met the grantee and contractor compliance requirement by adding LA Act provisions to its contracts/agreements.

In the area of accessibility, DCPL translated its Library Card application into six languages and proactively translated its Summer Reading Challenge marketing materials in Amharic, Spanish and Chinese. OHR will continue providing technical support to DCPL so it can improve its language support page tab on its website. DCPL also expanded its outreach efforts by providing services to over 100 Chinese-speaking residents and tripling the number of community engagement events it attended. OHR commends DCPL for engaging over 600 LEP/NEP readers in its Summer Challenge program. This effort was made in collaboration with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices (MOLA, MOAPIA, and MOAA). All these accomplishments reflect the agency's implementation of items in the FY19-20 Biennial Language Access Plan.

In the area of quality, DCPL had zero complaints filed against the agency. Language access field tests conducted at the DC Public Library in FY19 showed a decline in the provision of language access services. Interpretation services were provided in seven of 16 tests. Interpretation was provided more consistently in-person (six of seven tests) than over the telephone (one of nine tests). In-person testers largely reported receiving consistent, prompt language access service, but phone testers reported multiple intentional hang-ups and refusal of services. OHR recommends the agency certify its bilingual staff and follow through on plans to improve delivery of LA services to the LEP/NEP community.

In the area of preparedness, District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS) reported comprehensive data on LEP/NEP encounters, including bilingual staff, in-person and telephonic interpretation. OHR recommends that the agency finalize its Language Access policy and institute an acknowledgement of receipt to ensure all staff are informed about the internal LA policy requirements. The agency conducted 21 training events with 371 attendees in FY19. The LA program commends DCPS for designating a staff member specifically to manage its internal LA program.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated 300 documents into the top 5 languages encountered by the agency and per request, provided translation of documents into other languages. The LA program also commends DCPS for displaying its Language Support Page section prominently at the top of the homepage of the agency's website. DCPS boasts a robust community relations program which held 28 outreach events in FY19 with representation of all DCPS LEP/NEP families.

In the area of quality, one LA public complaint was filed against DCPS in FY19 and the agency was found in non-compliance. Seven DCPS locations were tested in FY19 and also tested in at least one of two previous years. Those locations were Brightwood, Cardozo, Columbia Heights, Coolidge, DCPS Main Office, Roosevelt and Wilson. DCPS slightly increased their average test scores from 3.55 in FY17 and FY18 combined to 3.94, but this was also not a significant improvement.

DCPS and OHR's Language Access program worked together to fulfill the outstanding corrective actions agreed upon in FY18. Those actions included ensuring staff receive language access compliance training; working closely with school principals to designate a LA point of contact; and strengthening coordination with the Office of the State Superintendent of Education. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs (DCRA) continues to lack data tracking for in-person interpretation and bilingual staff encounters with LEP/NEP clients. The data indicates there were three LA trainings in 2019, not enough for the size of this agency's workforce. The data also shows that only new hires were trained in LA protocol and not existing staff.

accessibility

DCRA partnered with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices and community-based organizations to engage the District's LEP/NEP community. However, the agency has yet to translate key vital documents and make multilingual resources available on its website.

In the area of accessibility, DCRA translated one document into Spanish, however, the agency did not make it accessible on its website. OHR's LA program looks forward to advising DCRA in enhancing its website's accessibility by further developing its language support section. DCRA participated in eight events in collaboration with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency Offices targeting the Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander and African communities.

In the area of quality, in FY19 DCRA underwent field testing and results show that interpretation rates and scores have improved each year since 2017. In 2017 and 2018, the agency's combined average score was 3.81 compared to 4.63 in 2019. Although the field testing scores have improved, there are gaps in delivery of LA and customer service.

quality

In FY19, no language access public complaints were filed against DCRA. In FY19, three out of 16 testers did not receive language assistance.

OHR has recommended previously that DCRA improve its compliance with language access requirements. Yet the agency has not provided comprehensive training for all frontline employees and has not translated vital documents used daily throughout DCRA's various program offices. The agency also has failed to train and monitor grantees to make sure they fulfill their obligation to provide mandated language access to LEP/NEP customers.

OHR again strongly recommends that in FY20, DCRA comply with the requirements of the Language Access Act which include training, translation and ensuring grantee compliance. OHR urges DCRA to dedicate staff to the establishment of a language access program so that all of DCRA's programs, services and grantees consistently comply with language access requirements.

DDS was without a Language Access Coordinator for about five months, but the new coordinator has expressed commitment and determination to bring the agency up to date with LA implementation and reporting requirements.

In the area of accessibility, DDS translated seven vital documents into three languages. Those documents include "Client Consent" forms, "Intake Appointment Letter", lobby signs and the agency's one-page summary. The documents, however, are still inaccessible to the LEP/NEP community because DDS failed to upload the translated documents to its website's language support pages, along with the translated document title. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Employment Services (DOES) has successfully and fully implemented all language access requisites by reporting comprehensive data on language encounters: in person, bilingual staff and telephonic interpretation. DOES has an updated Language Access (LA) policy, and trained contractors and grantees in the LA requirements. Additionally, DOES conducted 10 digital LA tutorials for frontline employees.

In the area of accessibility, OHR commends DOES for its work in developing a robust intranet system accessible to staff to provide LA services to LEP/NEP clients. DOES translated 200 documents, mostly into Spanish. The agency centralized all translated documents on the agency's intranet and continuously updates the "DOES en Español" website. OHR strongly recommends DOES explore translation options and tools so that its website is accessible in languages other than English and Spanish. The agency hosted and participated in 17 outreach events and engaged the LEP/NEP communities by collaborating with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices: Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander and African Affairs.

In the area of quality, although DOES provided frequent LA training and reminders to frontline staff, field testing showed that DOES still did not provide adequate telephonic interpretation assistance. As in previous years, testers at various divisions within DOES reported some intentional hang-ups and refusals of service. Some employees attempted to provide services but did not know how to connect to Language Line Solutions or apologetically suggested (in English) that the tester call back another time. OHR stands by its commitment to assist DOES in addressing this troubling trend of not providing adequate telephonic interpretation services. In FY19, the OHR's Language Access Program granted DOES the "Innovative Language Access Coordinator" award for executing an innovative language access plan that included the development of an internal language access portal and accomplished an accessibility compliance milestone by developing a fully functional bilingual website in Spanish, its most encountered language.

But the agency could make a more concerted effort to strengthen collaboration with LEP/NEP communities by working with the Mayor's Ethnic Constituency Offices that act as liaisons to the Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander and African communities.

In the area of quality, the agency adopted the recommendations from last year's compliance review by training its contractors/grantees and certifying five staff in their respective languages.

In FY19, the Department of Health Care Finance (DCHF) failed to meet reporting requirements mandated by the Language Access Act. OHR, therefore, is unable to assess the agency's ability to serve LEP/NEP customers.

DHCF made some attempts in FY19 to engage providers but still must take significant strides to satisfy key requirements of the Language Access Act. OHR's priority recommendations to DCHF: develop a comprehensive language access policy, provide training for staff to implement such a policy and create a "language support" section on the agency's website. Currently, LEP/NEP clients have no online access to a description of the agency or to vital documents in their language.

OHR strongly urges DHCF build the internal capacity needed to institute an effective language access program and to oversee the agency's large network of providers who interact daily with LEP/NEP clients.

In the area of preparedness, the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) has three data tracking sources for LEP/NEP encounters. However, the agency needs to improve its reporting of other information in order to get credit for work related to language access requirements. DHCD has ensured the Language Access certification of its funded entities and has also trained them on LA requirements. However, the agency's LA policy dates back to 2013 and must be updated with a policy receipt acknowledgement from the staff. In the area of accessibility, DHCD has translated 13 vital documents such as "Tenant Petition Complaint," "70% Voluntary Agreement Petition" and "Notice to Vacate for Demolition" on the agency's website. But the documents are not accessible to the LEP/NEP community because their titles are in English and not translated. The agency hosted six outreach events drawing 2,529 participants and worked collaboratively with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency Offices, which serve as liaisons to the Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander and African communities. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Human Services (DHS) has improved its data collection system to capture in-person, bilingual staff and telephonic interpretation encounters. It is strongly recommended that the agency update and implement its LA policy, which dates to 2014. The agency held 10 training sessions to cover the areas of cultural competency, civil rights and language access. All sessions were relevant to the delivery of services for the diverse population served by DHS. OHR is pleased that the agency followed recommendations from the FY18 LA Compliance Review by tripling the frequency of training and increasing the number of participants. DHS has improved its compliance in grantee/contractor requirements by providing language access training to its funded entities however, it is strongly recommended that DHS include LA compliance verbiage in its agreements, contracts and MOUs with funded entities.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated 30 documents into six languages. However, the agency still has not made its website accessible to the LEP/NEP community by creating "Language Support" pages on its website, as recommended in last year's compliance review. The agency participated in 18 outreach events that included 3,845 participants and collaborated with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices to connect with the District's diverse population.

In the area of quality, the OHR's Language Access Program notes that there has been a significant decline in the quality of LA services provision. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) reported only one source of encounters with LEP/NEP individuals: telephonic interpretation. OHR strongly recommends that the agency revise its tracking system to capture bilingual staff encounters. The agency has a LA policy on file which is due for review and an acknowledgement receipt from staff.

In collaboration with OHR and the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices (MOLA, MOAA and MOAPIA), almost 350 staff members participated in 14 sessions covering Cultural Competency and Language Access training. DMV took a proactive step by including DGS-assigned security guards as they are the agency's only public facing contractor.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated two documents "Medical Eye Report" and "Disability Placard" into six languages. However, the translated documents were not uploaded to DMV's website in the language support pages so they are not fully accessible to the LEP/NEP community. The agency failed to follow 2018 Annual Compliance review recommendations to strengthen outreach efforts to engage the District's LEP/NEP community. OHR's LA program urges the agency to reach out more effectively by teaming up with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices.

No formal public complaints were filed against DMV in FY19 although there was one inquiry made to OHR. Additionally, DMV has yet to take corrective action in a non-compliance finding by OHR in FY17. In the area of preparedness, the Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) improved its reporting of LEP/NEP encounters by implementing a new data collection system to capture interaction with bilingual staff. The agency's LA policy also was updated in FY19. The agency complied with the LA program's recommendation to provide comprehensive language access training to its staff and completed nine trainings with 144 participants. OHR's LA program looks forward to continuing provide guidance and support in the area of training. In FY19, the agency did not confirm whether it has public facing grantees/contractors. It is important that the agency verifies whether it contracts with such entities and then prioritize LA compliance certification and training for them.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated nine documents into five languages. But the documents are not posted on the language support pages of DPR's website, making them inaccessible to the LEP/NEP community. Because of DPR's mission to provide and supervise an extensive array of recreational activities for all age groups in the District OHR strongly recommends the agency update the LSP section of its website in accordance with all changes made to the English-language website. The agency hosted four community outreach events, including "Multicultural Hiring Fair," "DPR Programs/Diversity/Outreach" and "Taste of the World," and it participated in another five events to engage the District's diverse LEP/NEP population. DPR's commitment to the Language Access Act to recruit and hire multilingual staff by sponsoring its own "Multicultural Hiring Fair" is highly commendable. DPR's efforts to conduct intentional diversified outreach in FY19 earned the agency OHR's Language Access Program "Outstanding Outreach Award."

In the area of quality, no language access public complaints were filed against DPR. However, only five of 14 field testers received interpretation services at DPR facilities in 2019. DPR Customer Service and the Petworth and Raymond Recreation Centers were the only three facilities tested in FY19 that were tested in the previous two years and their staffs' ability to provide LA services improved only slightly. These facilities provided interpretation to two out of eight testers in FY19 compared to zero out of 14 testers in FY18 and FY17 combined. Based on the field test results, it is imperative the agency strengthen its LA training of all staff.

In the area of preparedness, the Department of Public Works (DPW) reported two sources of encounters: telephone language services line and bilingual staff. Because the agency has not updated its LA policy since 2015, the OHR Language Access program strongly recommends the agency update its policy with OHR's policy template. DPW did not report any trainings for FY19, therefore OHR strongly recommends the agency train its existing and new staff in FY20.

In the area of accessibility, DPW translated six documents into five languages. However, the translated documents are not accessible through the language support page of DPW's website. The agency participated in two outreach events that included 1,750 participants. FY18 Encounters: 1,301

In the area of preparedness, the Office of Attorney General's Child Support Services Division (CSSD) reported comprehensive data on LEP/NEP encounters. The agency has updated its LA policy and is working with its federal sister agency DC Superior Court to reach an agreement that both agencies be bound by the Language Access Act because the District's law mirrors Title VI of the U.S. Civil Rights Act of 1964, which requires federal agencies to provide meaningful access to their programs, services and activities for LEP individuals. The agency trained some staff; however, details were not reported.

In the area of accessibility, CSSD must prioritize its efforts to translate vital public documents and make them available on its website. The agency also must create a language support section on its website. The LA program is aware that CSSD conducted community outreach to showcase the additional services for its target population, but the agency failed to report the details in its implementation report.

In the area of quality, the agency received no LA public complaints. However, the agency failed to adhere to recommendations in the FY18 LA annual review regarding the development and implementation of a language support page on its website and to certify its bilingual staff. Based on the lack of reporting, it is unclear if CSSD adhered to the recommendation that LEP/NEP customers receive automated correspondence and messages in their native language. The agency partially complied with the recommendation to reach out to the LEP/NEP community.

accessibility

With the exception of meeting signage requirements, OCP failed to translate vital documents and few efforts in FY19 to fulfill accessibility requirements.

In FY19, as in FY18, the Office of Contract and Procurement did not comply with reporting requirements as mandated by the Language Access Act. However, communication between OCP and OHR's LA program improved in FY19 and a new Language Access Coordinator was appointed in the third quarter of the fiscal year. OHR looks forward to supporting the agency in addressing longstanding gaps in LA implementation and compliance.

In the area of accessibility, OCP met the signage requirement, however, OCP could improve signage and make it visible public-facing areas like the Resource Center. OHR recommends that OCP make its website accessible to LEP/NEP clients by translating and uploading vital documents.

In the area of quality, OCP made progress in FY19 by assigning a new LAC and forming a LAC team within the agency that is now in communication with OHR's LA Program.

In FY20 OHR strongly recommends that OCP continues working to fully satisfy the LA compliance requirements.

In the area of preparedness, the agency reported 0 encounters with the LEP/NEP community. The OHR Language Access Program urges the Office of Planning to improve the data collection process in order to capture encounters more comprehensively to include in-person and bilingual staff encounters. The agency has an updated LA policy on file. The agency has no public facing grantees. The LA program strongly advises that LA training be given to staff during FY20. This includes consulting OHR's Language Access Program to ensure all areas of compliance are covered in the training deck.

In the area of accessibility, the Office of Planning has translated two documents in seven languages, however, the documents are not accessible on the agency's website. OP participated in one outreach event targeting the LEP/NEP community. Although the OP boasts an outreach strategy by funding local advocacy organizations to connect with hard-to-reach populations it is not clear in its reporting if this effort was successful in reaching the API and Latino communities.

No public complaints were filed against OP in FY19. The agency was not tested in FY19. OHR urges OP to address accessibility concerns in FY20.

In the area of quality, the agency has not fulfilled the recommendations from last year's compliance review. OHR's Language Access program strongly encourages the agency to diversify its outreach efforts to include other LEP/NEP communities in the District. OHR acknowledges that OP focused on Census 2020 outreach efforts and the LA program strongly recommends that these efforts be expanded to other LEP/NEP immigrant communities. OHR once again encourages OP to leverage the support of the Mayor's Offices on African, Asian and Pacific Islander and Latino Affairs and community-based partners such as the DC Language Access Coalition to successfully implement these goals. Additionally, OP needs to develop and translate culturally targeted outreach materials to engage LEP/NEP stakeholders, and ensure that translated documents are accessible via the "language support" section on the agency's website.

No language access public complaints were filed against OTR in FY19. The agency was tested for the first time in FY19 and provided LA resources in seven out of eight field tests. It is crucial that the agency train its staff regarding professional conduct in serving the District's diverse LEP/NEP community.

FY19 Encounters: 4,860 | FY18 Score: 7/12 | FY18 Encounters: 4,340

In the area of preparedness, the Office of Tax and Revenue (OTR) implemented data collection to include bilingual staff encounters with LEP/NEP customers. The use of dual handset phones showed improvement in the ability to serve LEP/NEP customers, evidenced by the increased amount of telephonic interpretation. The agency has an updated LA Policy on file. It is recommended that training be made a priority in FY20. OTR's LA Program looks forward to supporting OTR in its efforts to ensure contractor compliance and training of its only public-facing contractor: security guards.

In the area of accessibility, OTR participated in 23 community outreach events that attracted 1,115 participants. However, the agency should strengthen its outreach efforts and reach a diverse population by collaborating with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency Offices (MOAA, MOAPIA and MOLA). The agency has not translated any vital documents and has made no additions to the Language Support Pages on its website. OTR strongly recommends OTR translate its vital documents and upload them to its website.

In the area of quality, OTR's FY19 field testing results show that in seven of eight testers received interpretation services. The field-testing narrative also highlighted the need for OTR employees to undergo language access and customer service training to appropriately serve LEP/NEP constituents.

FY18 Encounters: 6

In the area of preparedness, the Office of the People's Counsel (OPC) reported comprehensive data on LEP/NEP encounters with bilingual staff and telephonic and in-person interpretation. The agency has an updated comprehensive Language Access policy on file that includes LA certification verbiage for funded entities although the agency has no public facing grantees. Nonetheless, the agency should recertify acknowledgement of receipt from staff as a reminder of LA specific requirements. The agency had one LA and Cultural Competence training with 12 attendees in FY19. OPC continues its commitment toward compliance with the LA Act, and OHR looks forward to supporting the agency with LA training of its staff and all other compliance matters.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated 11 documents into six languages, including "Consumer Complaints Script," "Consumer Bill of Rights" and "Utility Billing Scams." The LA program commends OPC for prominently displaying its language support page section at the top of its website's home page. However, the translated pages do not include the agency's mission, initiatives or services. As is, the LSP section only provides translated documents. The agency continues to uphold outreach requirements by conducting comprehensive grassroots and community engagement activities such as neighborhood walk-throughs in areas populated by LEP/NEP individuals and businesses. The office exceeds outreach expectations by providing in-person interpreters at some of its agency-specific citywide community events that attract the District's linguistically diverse residents.

In the area of quality, the agency continued to show its commitment to the LA Act by certifying one of its dual-language, public-facing staff in both languages. The agency adhered to OHR's LA program's recommendation to improve its outreach requirements and increased its collaboration with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency Offices: MOAA, MOAPIA and MOLA. OHR's LA program commends the Office of the People's Counsel on achieving a perfect annual review compliance score of 12/12 for the past 2 years.

FY18 Score: 11/14 | FY18 Encounters: 10,300 | FY19 Encounters: 11,697

In the area of preparedness, the Office of the State Superintendent of Education (OSSE) reported comprehensive data on LEP/NEP encounters with bilingual staff, telephonic and in-person interpretation. The agency has an updated LA policy on file and maintained its commitment to preparedness by continuing to train its existing and newly hired staff. The LA program commends OSSE for institutionalizing language access procedures in the communications workshops and its handbook. The agency ensured the LA compliance of funded entities by equipping them with telephonic interpretation service and training and established a process for LA reporting. OHR recommends the agency maintain LA requirements in the forefront of its future acquisition of services that may interface with the LEP/NEP community.

In the area of accessibility, the agency translated 62 documents into seven languages. OHR's LA program recommends the agency continue its efforts to update the content of the Language Support pages on the OSSE website to improve accessibility for the LEP/NEP community. OHR's LA program commends OSSE for expanding outreach efforts from seven to 34 outreach events. However, OHR recommends the agency collaborate with the Mayor's Office on Asian and Pacific Islander Affairs (MOAPIA) to better engage that LEP/NEP community.

In the area of quality, OHR's LA program commends OSSE for its continued efforts in translating confidential case-specific documents related to the Early Intervention Program and OSSE's Office of Dispute Resolution.

Field testing results showed that 11 out of 15 testers received interpretation services from various OSSE divisions. The Main Office (the only division tested in previous years) received a perfect score of 6/6, providing interpretation services to seven of seven testers. This is a significant improvement over previous years when the division only provided interpretation to seven of 11 testers. The Parent Resource Center also provided interpretation over the telephone to all three testers and received a perfect score of 6/6. However, the other divisions tested in 2019—Associates for Renewal in Education, Childcare Licensing and Child and Family Development, which were tested only in-person—provided interpretation to only one out of five testers receiving an average score of 1.20/6.00. Although testing results show overall improvements, OHR recommends that OSSE specifically address service gaps found through field testing.

FY19 Top Languages Encountered: Spanish, Amharic
FY18 Encounters: 174

In the area of preparedness, the Office of Tenant Advocate (OTA) did not report any LA trainings in FY19 and continued to operate with an outdated LA policy. The OHR LA program strongly recommends that OTA update its LA policy, and train new and existing staff. At this time, it is unclear whether the agency has any grantees/contractors that would be covered by LA requirements. In the area of accessibility, OTA translated four documents into two languages: "Team Work Makes the Dream Work," "Tenant Summit Program 2019," "OTA Legal Representation Agreement" and "TOPA 5." Although not all of these documents are considered public facing, the ones that do meet the public facing criteria are not accessible on the OTA website's Language Support Pages section. The agency participated in 24 community events with 1,467 attendees. Although notable, the agency should broaden its outreach capacity by engaging the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices (MOAA, MOAPIA and MOLA).

In the area of quality, no LA public complaints were filed against OTA in FY19. However, the agency did not take any steps to address recommendations issued by the OHR LA program in the FY18 LA compliance review.

FY19 Top Languages Encountered:

Spanish, Mandarin, Amharic, Vietnamese, Portuguese, French, Arabic, Korean, Russian, Turkish, Tigrinya, Farsi, Cantonese, Japanese

FY18 Encounters: 50,345

In the area of preparedness, the Office of Unified Communications (OUC) reported only one source of language access encounters: telephonic interpretation. OHR strongly recommends the agency resolve how to capture bilingual staff encounters with LEP/NEP individuals. OHR also strongly recommends the agency update and institutionalize its Language Access policy and secure acknowledgement of receipt from its staff to ensure they know LA requirements. The agency had only one training on file called "Ripped from the Head Lines" a training tool that is related to diversity and inclusion but is not Language Access Act compliance training. OHR's LA program recommends the agency increase appropriate training efforts. The agency has no public facing grantees/contractors. OHR recommends the agency strengthen its commitment to the LA Coordinator cohort by increasing participation in bi-monthly LAC meetings.

In the area of accessibility, although OUC is not frequently visited by the public it is still recommended that the agency displays LA related messaging such as the LA identification poster that informs LEP/NEP individuals they are entitled to telephonic interpretation services.

In FY19, the OUC translated one document, but the document is not accessible to the LEP/NEP community because it is not posted in the language support page of the agency's website. The agency reached out to the community by participating in eight events with 367 attendees. However, OHR recommends the agency strengthen its outreach strategy by collaborating with the Mayor's three Ethnic Constituency offices: MOAA, MOAPIA and MOLA.

In the area of quality, OUC had no LA public compliants filed against it in FY19 and was not field tested. The agency continues to take steps towards compliance with the Language Access Act by hiring and certifying bilingual staff. Nonetheless, OHR recommends the agency adhere to long-standing Language Access implementation recommendations issued by OHR's LA Program.

Hello Chris,

Please see the response below:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s). Yes
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? There is video surveillance camera in the newer additions to the fleet If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? We are currently working through this component as a part of a of larger system enhancement. Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving? For fleet vehicles, vehicles are signed in/out daily for each user. For school buses, keys are stored on the active fleet and locked for fleet not in use.
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of? No.

We will send copies of the contracts as soon as possible. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Good Afternoon Director Brumley & Deputy Meyers,

I hope you are doing well. I am Chris Vass, Management Analyst with the DC Office of Risk Management (ORM). On behalf of Jed Ross, Director/Chief Risk Officer, I am reaching out to you and other District agencies in order to undertake a review and analysis of city-wide fleet safety programs that are being used by District agencies. In order for me to begin the review and analysis, I need your assistance to compile all data and information related to your safety program:

- Does your agency have a contract(s) related to GPS (or similar devices like Auto Vehicle Locator) and/or other District Driver Safety programs? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- Are there video recorders in your assigned fleet vehicles? If so, is there a process on when the recordings are download/stored? Is this managed by a third party? If yes, please provide a copy of the contract(s).
- For your fleet vehicles, how does the agency manage the keys to the vehicle(s) and the tracking of employees driving?
- Does your agency have any concerns with staff usage of the fleet or driving, or anything you would like to make us aware of?

The goal of this project is to ultimately bring all agencies under one city-wide management system for GPS, liability documentation (video), safe driving training, data collection (life of vehicle, miles driven, speeding, dangerous driving, possible maintenance needs, performance metrics, etc....). We are in the early stages of this endeavor but feel it could lead to monumental change for the District. One procurement, one system, economies of scale, and better data for everyone.

Please let know if you have any question or concerns.

Thanks,

*Chris Vass
Management Analyst

Hi Ross,

1Health is enabling our partners to easily deploy, facilitate, and monitor Covid-19 testing through our testing as a service (TaaS) platform.

We have partnered with large corporations, small businesses, universities, government agencies, healthcare providers, etc. to simplify this tumultuous Covid-19 testing environment across the United States.

Key components of our TaaS Covid-19 platform are:

- Testing - FDA EUA, saliva-based, self-collected, PCR Covid-19 test (98% sensitivity & 100% specificity)
- Track Results - administrative portal to see organization results along with individual dashboards for personal viewing
- Track Kits - ability to know where each test is in transit when leaving your facility and where it is upon receipt at lab for processing
- Inventory Management - order as many tests as you need when you need them to support your testing strategy
- Insurance Billing - seamless insurance integration
- Reporting - Result reporting to CDC, state, and local health departments all handled by 1health
- Open API - flexibility to meet different project workflows

Would you have a few minutes to connect? Would love to be a resource as we head into 2021.

Plans for Saturday still are being tweaked, but the spartan ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. on the broad, exterior steps of the John A. Wilson Building, in good weather or bad, with no seating for councilmembers or guests. Under Mayor Muriel Bowser's public health emergency orders, outdoor events are limited to 25 persons, so each councilmember is limited to seven guests and must stand apart from the ceremony until called. The memos urge the councilmembers to stay out of the John A. Wilson Building entirely and note officers from the city's protective service "will be assisting with crowd control and enforcement." It could get complicated with so many egos involved.

Local politics in 2020 started out with its typical brand of shenanigans. Disgraced former Councilmember Harry Thomas Jr. dipped a toe back into public life and hinted at a possible future run for his old Ward 5 seat. Former Ward 2 Councilmember Jack Evans resigned amid scandal to avoid expulsion and then turned around and announced a campaign for his Ward 2 seat (and someone purchased the domain for evans2020.com, which took you to an article about the feds raiding his home). And Mayor Muriel Bowser endorsed New York City Mayor Mike Bloomberg for president despite his legacy of violating the rights of New Yorkers, most of whom are Black or Hispanic, through his expansion of the unconstitutional stop-and-frisk policing tactic.

Of protests and panda cubs: The biggest DC-area stories of 2020 that weren't about the coronavirus

December 29, 2020

WTOP // Jack Moore

There's a meme circulating on social media that shrewdly sums up the year: January, February, quarantine, December.

No doubt about it, the global coronavirus pandemic swallowed up 2020 with its terrible toll on human life, the economy, school, work — in short, almost every facet of our lives. And the headlines on WTOP.com certainly reflected that.

But other things happened this year, too. Important, groundbreaking, inspiring, tragic and yes, some lighter, fluffier and adorable things — here's to looking at you, Xiao Qi Ji — all happened this year.

Here's a look at some of the year's biggest D.C.-area news stories that had nothing — mostly — to do with the coronavirus pandemic.

Calls for change

Sparked by the killing of George Floyd in police custody in Minneapolis in May, D.C. became one of the national flash points of protest related to race and policing in America this summer.

The epicenter was Lafayette Square and the streets around the White House where on June 1, broadcast live on television to the nation, law enforcement officers using batons, shields and chemical agents forcefully cleared large crowds of protesters before President Donald Trump, flanked by other top officials, walked to nearby St. John's Church and brandished an upside-down Bible.

The use of federal officers to police the streets of D.C. drew criticism from D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser, but she soon faced questions about her own police force's tactics after a large crowd of peaceful protesters were penned on Swann Street — a quiet, leafy residential street in Northwest — as part of a controversial police tactic known as “kettling.”

Police deployed flash bangs, blocked-off alleyways and deployed a chemical irritant. Faced with arrest for violating the city's emergency curfew, some protesters camped out in houses where owners had opened their doors.

Among those taking refuge: WTOP's own Ken Duffy, who was on the streets of D.C. to cover the protest.

Over the summer, the protests continued, and ultimately several hundred people were arrested.

Bowser positioned herself as a high-profile Trump opponent and even commissioned D.C.-area artists to paint the pavement on 16th Street NW across the street from the White House in enormous, blazing yellow letters, officially re-christening the street “Black Lives Matter Plaza.”

Critics, including those affiliated with the anti-racist organization, decried the paintjob as a PR stunt.

In response, Bowser told reporters: “Black Lives Matter is very critical of police. They’re critical of me. But that doesn’t mean that I don’t see them and support the things that will make our community safe — and that we don’t all have a larger responsibility in the nation’s capital to send that very clear message to our nation.”

Policing the police

George Floyd’s death in May also brought unprecedented scrutiny to police departments across the country, sparking calls for reform and tighter oversight of police departments — and, in some of the largest jurisdictions in the D.C. area — leadership shake-ups.

By the end of the year, police reform commissions had been set up across the region and the chiefs of police in Prince George’s County in Maryland and Fairfax County in Virginia, as well as the police chief of the D.C. police had all either left their posts or announced plans to do so.

In Prince George’s County, Chief Hank Stawinski said in June he was stepping down from one of Maryland’s largest law-enforcement agencies shortly after more than a dozen officers of color filed a lawsuit alleging “pervasive” racism and discrimination in the department.

Several months later, the department paid out a $20 million settlement to the family of a D.C. man who was shot to death while handcuffed in the front seat of a police cruiser in January — in what was believed to be among the largest such settlement in the U.S. involving someone killed by police.

Last month, Fairfax County Police Chief Ed Roessler said he was retiring in February after leading the largest police department in Virginia since 2013.

Then, in a move that surprised many, D.C. Police Chief Peter Newsham, who has only served as D.C.’s top cop for three years, said he would leave his post to become chief of the much smaller police force in Prince William County, Virginia.

Newsham’s resignation — he has said he plans to stick around until after the presidential inauguration — came after the D.C. Council approved sweeping police reforms and trimmed his department.

The department’s handling of the summer’s wave of protests also came in for criticism, including from activist groups who argued the department was tougher on anti-racist demonstrators than on Trump-affiliated groups who descended on D.C. in a series of rallies after Trump’s election loss and violently clashed with counterprotesters.

The chairman of the D.C. Council, Phil Mendelson, said Newsham's resignation presented an opportunity to try new approaches to law enforcement.

"We're losing a good cop, but sometimes a fresh face can be good, too," Mendelson said.

Other policymakers say the entire structure of policing in the U.S. — and the D.C. area — needs rethinking.

What's in a name?

Following the death of George Floyd in police custody in Minneapolis, the calls for change erupted that around the country took many forms.

In June, Washington's NFL team began grappling with its racist legacy. The team was founded in 1932 by George Marshall Preston, a segregationist who refused to sign Black players until he was forced to do so.

But changing the team's traditional name — which many consider a racist slur referring to Native Americans — seemed like a taller order.

After all, team owner Dan Snyder, who had resisted previous efforts to rename the team, famously vowed in 2013, "We will never change the name of the team. We'll never change the name. It's that simple. NEVER — you can use caps."

Floyd's killing in May spurred a nationwide reckoning over racism and equity in many facets of American life. There was fierce debate over Confederate monuments, statues, streets and other markers in the D.C. region.

And in July — after Nike and Amazon said they would no longer sell the team's gear on their sites and after team officials announced a thorough review to study the name — the ground shifted and "never" finally came: The old name was no more.

To start with, the team settled on a placeholder name, simply "Washington Football Team." But the basic moniker has taken root.

And — for the first time in a while — the team is winning again. At least for now.

It's a boy!

It turned out 2020 had a few nice surprises in store for us — or at least one: The birth of the new panda cub at the National Zoo.

Word came in August that giant panda matriarch Mei Xiang could be pregnant — but there'd been false alarms before — and, besides, at 22, she would be the oldest giant panda in North America to give birth.

Nevertheless, delighted viewers watched the delivery live on the zoo's Panda Cam on Aug. 21 as Mei Xiang welcomed her fourth cub into the world.

In the months since, viewers glued to the livestream have watched the pink, hairless creature about the size of a stick of butter develop into an adorable ball of fluff — 21.2 inches long from nose-tip to tail and 13.4 pounds at last checkup — and even begin to take his first steps.

In an online poll last month, panda watchers selected the name Xiao Qi Ji, which means “Little Miracle.”

Still, all good things must come to an end. Earlier this month, zoo officials said that a long-running agreement with Chinese wildlife officials would be extended for a few more years but that come the end of 2023, the little guy as well as his parents — Mei Xiang and pop, Tian Tian, who have lived at the zoo since 2000 — would be headed back to China.

Wild weather

Weather’s always a big deal around here. Why else would we bring it you every 10 minutes “on the 8s?”

With so many people working remotely amid stay-at-home orders and other coronavirus restrictions, traffic, by and large, wasn’t what it usually is. But the D.C. area still saw its share of wild weather this year.

In early February, a series of winter thunderstorms whipped up a total of five tornadoes across the D.C. region, including one in Loudoun County, Virginia, and two in Montgomery County, Maryland.

The National Weather Service said the sheer number of twisters was “atypical” for February.

In late summer, Tropical Storm Isaias blew through the D.C. region, bringing several inches of rain and flooding and downing trees and power lines. Tragically, one person was killed in St. Mary’s County, Maryland, when a tree fell on her car as she was driving.

But it was a late summer storm that led to some of the most dramatic photos of the year, courtesy of WTOP’s own Dave Dildine.

Heavy rain in early September caused flash flooding across the D.C. area, including on Route 50, one of the major commuter routes into and out of D.C., trapping drivers in rapidly rising floodwaters.

Dildine had his camera at the ready as rescue crews launched an inflatable boat to rescue one of the drivers, who had resorted to using a cup to scoop water from her lap as she waited for help.

An election like no other

Just about every presidential election could be classified as historic, but this year was a little extra unprecedented.

Of course the political stakes were high: The election year began with an unsuccessful impeachment attempt against President Donald Trump by congressional Democrats.

But by the time Election Day rolled around, another big story had overtaken the headlines: the raging coronavirus pandemic.

The presidential race was a roller coaster — the conventions were held virtually because of the coronavirus pandemic, the first debate was a train wreck and then came President Trump's own coronavirus diagnosis.

With the coronavirus pandemic in mind, D.C.-area election officials — and their counterparts across the country — had to work overtime to keep polling places from turning into super-spreader events and the result was: an election like no other.

In the D.C. area, Virginia loosened rules for early voting and saw sky-high turnout from the first day.

In Maryland and D.C., election officials encouraged voting by mail, sending ballots or applications to all registered voters and installing hundreds of massive steel ballot drop-off boxes around the region to store completed ballots.

In the end, it took a while to count all those absentee ballots — especially in the key battleground states — but when the results were finally in and The Associated Press and other news networks called the election for Democratic challenger Joe Biden, residents of the District were ready to celebrate.

Scenes of jubilation — including more than a few Champagne corks popping — were seen across the city, including on Black Lives Matter Plaza, which had previously been the site of sometimes tense protests over the summer.

Other big news of the year

In the face of large protests — including by some reportedly intent on committing violence — Virginia passed a rash of new gun-control measures, including expanded background checks and a “red flag” law. A ban on assault weapons, however, was shelved.

Jack Evans, formerly the longest-serving member of the D.C. Council, and once one of the most powerful dealmakers in the District, resigned in January ahead of an expected vote by the other members to expel him amid allegations of ethical misconduct. Evans ran for his old seat just a few months later in the Democratic primary but was handily defeated, finishing seventh out of eight candidates on the ballot.

In October, nearly three years after Northern Virginia accountant Bijan Ghaisar was shot and killed by two U.S. Park Police officers after a low-speed police chase, the two officers were charged in the case. The officers, Alejandro Amaya and Lucas Vinyard, were indicted on manslaughter and firearms charges in Fairfax County. The indictments came after the U.S. Justice Department declined to prosecute the pair.

In October, Pope Francis made history when he named 13 new cardinals — including Washington Archbishop Wilton Gregory, whose appointment would make him the first Black American cardinal. The 72-year-old called his appointment a positive gesture, especially for Black Catholics.

The Year In D.C. Politics: Pandemics, Plazas And Policing

December 29, 2020

WAMU/DCist // Martin Auster Muhle

“Goddamn shit is confusing as a motherfucker, man.”

Ward 7 Councilmember Vincent Gray may not have known it, but he was speaking for all of us when he inadvertently uttered those words while unmuted during a D.C. Council session in July. While he was specifically referring to a particularly complicated debate that lawmakers were having that very moment — virtually, no less, given the pandemic — Gray’s words aptly summarize the trainwreck of a rollercoaster of a dumpster fire that 2020 has felt like.

There’s been a bit of everything in D.C. politics this year: ethical lapses, generational changes in the city’s legislature, testy fights over tax policy and rent control, a symbolic step forward for D.C. statehood, and a controversial presidential endorsement. And that’s not even accounting for a pandemic that upended daily life as much as it did the city’s finances, and a reckoning over racial justice that could well reshape policing in D.C. for a generation to come.

It was, well, a decade of a year.

The end of the Evans era

After three decades on the D.C. Council, Ward 2’s Jack Evans’ resignation in early January was as expected as it was sudden. Facing a possible expulsion vote after an investigation found that he had abused his position for private gain, Evans’ decision to step down wasn’t just a face-saving exercise — it was also something of a political earthquake in the small world of the city’s legislative body. Evans was both the council’s longest-serving member — he first took office in 1991 — and also a consistent supporter of the business community, chairman of the powerful finance committee and reliable ally to Mayor Muriel Bowser. He didn’t go quietly, though; Evans quickly announced he would run for re-election to the seat he had just resigned, an effort that faltered badly when he placed seventh out of eight candidates in the June primary. And his replacement was a surprise, too: political neophyte Brooke Pinto emerged from virtual political nowhere to squeak by in the primary and handily win a four-year term in November. At 28, she’s the youngest member of the council, and replaces a man whose term in office lasted longer than she’s been alive.

Bowser and Bloomberg

Before she was with Biden, Bowser was all in for Michael Bloomberg. How could we forget? The former mayor of New York and late entrant into the already crowded Democratic presidential primary made an outsized splash during his brief run, largely because he spent ungodly amounts of his personal fortune to try and win. (How ungodly? It was more than the federal stimulus Congress approved.) And Bowser — who said he was a “problem-solver” — was alongside him the whole way, giving cover when Bloomberg was criticized for NYPD’s use of stop-and-frisk during his tenure as New York’s mayor and making sexist comments about women. There were brief whispers that Bowser could be in line for a cabinet position in a Bloomberg administration (vice president, even!), his run didn’t amount to much — he dropped out after a dismal showing on Super Tuesday, when his only victory came in American Samoa.

For her part, Bowser quickly jumped to Team Biden, and after his win made a trip to Delaware for his victory speech — likely violating her own city’s rules on travel and quarantining.

The pandemic hits

It was early March when D.C. recorded its first known case of COVID-19. Little could many residents imagine what would have followed: almost 30,000 positive cases, more than 760 lives lost, a city brought to a virtual standstill, schools shuttered, a historic spike in unemployment, and more. In political terms, the pandemic pushed the council onto Zoom, heralding a new era of democratic process and engagement that is as novel as it can be confusing. More importantly, though, COVID-19 has busted the budget, costing the city hundreds of millions in revenue and sparking debates over how to best support the many businesses and residents who have been hammered by the virus. Some officials say cuts are inevitable; others say it’s time to increase taxes on those who can most afford it. Either way, what is clear is that the pandemic has again exposed D.C.’s persistent racial and social inequalities: Black communities are painfully overrepresented among COVID casualties, kids in under-resourced communities continue to struggle with virtual learning, and many Black and Brown residents are essential workers who can’t simply work from home (or had trouble getting access to government assistance). There have been moments of hope, though — mutual aid efforts across D.C., the initiatives to help kids keep up with school, residents donating their stimulus checks to others, and more. But there’s little question that the recovery will be long, and require tough political decisions. And coming early next year is a big one: how and when D.C. should reopen schools.

Plaza politics

It was political posturing at its finest. With a few buckets worth of yellow paint spelling out “Black Lives Matter” on a two-block stretch of 16th Street NW in early June, Bowser loudly sided with the nationwide protests against police brutality, attracting worldwide media attention while also issuing a not-so-subtle dig to the occupant of the White House only a few blocks away. Almost overnight Black Lives Matter Plaza became a focal point of activism and protests in the city; everyone from parents with their kids to politicians like the late John Lewis and Vice President-elect Kamala Harris stopped by for pictures, while others tied the knot and celebrated Biden’s win there. But while Bowser was hailed (and mimicked) nationally for commissioning the mural, local activists have grumbled of what they say is a growing disconnect between the words written on the street and the actions of the city in making them a reality — even more so when police and protesters clashed repeatedly at the plaza over the summer, and after the police killings of Deon Kay and Karon Hylton Brown. For them, Bowser has unfairly appropriated a slogan and a movement. Still, for many visitors to the plaza, it remains a powerful statement. More recently, it has also become contested territory — in two recent pro-Trump protests, the white nationalist Proud Boys made getting to the plaza a focus of their violent efforts.

D.C. statehood takes a step forward

If you’ve lived in D.C. long enough, you know not to hold your breath for statehood. But over the summer, something big happened: the U.S. House of Representatives, for the first time ever, passed a bill to make D.C. the nation’s 51st state. The success, which was years in the making, came as a growing number of Democrats have signed on to the cause, local officials have become more assertive about it, and Republicans managed to make the case for statehood better than anyone. That was most clear over the summer, when President Trump brought federal police forces into the city in response to racial justice protests — something made possible by the fact that D.C. remains federal territory. Trump himself said statehood “will never happen,” congressional Republicans pushed to retrocede the city to Maryland, and statehood became a prominent campaign line for Republicans in their fight to hold their majority in the Senate. And then there was Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Arkansas), who memorably said D.C. could never be a state because... it doesn't have as many miners and loggers as Wyoming. (What D.C. does have, though, is more people.) But as with most things statehood, the House vote was something of a step forward and then — nothing. While a Democratic House and White House bode well for the fight, the Senate remains an obstacle. Still, activists remain optimistic — they say their hope was always to win a bigger Senate majority in 2022, and then move forward. Maybe, but don't hold your breath yet.

The award for most improved D.C. agency goes to...

D.C. Board of Elections, come on up. After a disastrous June primary (who doesn't want to wait in line for five hours to vote?), the agency decided to go all in on mail voting by sending every registered voter a ballot in the mail. The gamble paid off: two-thirds of the 346,491 people who voted in November did so using those ballots, with an overwhelming majority choosing to leave their ballots at any of the 55 drop boxes that were placed around town. And it wasn't just the mail ballots; having polling places at Nationals Park and the Capital One Arena was something of a test, but one that proved to be popular. Now, the BOE still has some improvements to make — can we talk about those mailers, for one? — but all told, there's little question that November's election was far better than June's. Of course, when you do something well, people will demand it again — mail ballots and drop boxes, for example. But some are talking about more significant changes, including finding ways to make it easier for voters to navigate massively crowded council races.

Protests and policing

As protests over police violence and racial justice flared up across the nation early in the summer, the Metropolitan Police Department quickly came under the spotlight. Within weeks, the D.C. Council passed a broad police reform bill, speeding the release of body camera footage, changing training and discipline in the ranks and banning MPD from buying surplus military equipment and using chemical irritants on peaceful protesters. Efforts to defund MPD, a primary demand of protesters, were more limited, and officers engaged in controversial tactics against protesters. Local police also killed 18-year-old Deon Kay in September amid a foot chase. The following month, a police chase that may have violated department policy killed 20-year-old Karon Hylton-Brown. All of this happened just as D.C. saw a spike in homicides, with the end-of-the-year body count already at a 15-year high. The council is likely to stay engaged in policing and criminal justice in 2021, and the Police Reform Commission it created to study the department is expected to recommend changes by spring. It of course remains to be seen whether those proposals ever become law, and how amenable incoming Chief Robert Contee will be to reforms or budget cuts. The D.C. Police Union, for its part, is expected to put up a fight; already it has said that the city's high homicide tally for 2020 stems in part from council legislation, blamed a “crime wave” on a specific councilmember, and aimed criticism at violence interrupters, a violence reduction method favored by progressive reformers.

Notable defeats and departures

No one was a more reliable ally on the Council for Bowser than Ward 4's Brandon Todd, but in the end her support couldn't usher him to a second full term in June's Democratic primary. That's when he lost to Janeese Lewis George, a self-described democratic socialist who painted Todd as out of touch (which he didn't help by largely refusing to debate her) and later withstood an onslaught of misleading and inflammatory mailers from a pro-charter group backing Todd. But worry not for Todd: he's on to his gig as a lobbyist for Washington Gas.

Even closer to Bowser was Rashad Young, who served as her city administrator since she took office in 2015 before announcing this summer that he was departing public service to join Howard University. (His decision to leave followed his role in brokering a multi-million deal between Howard and the city, which earned him a $2,500 for violating city ethics rules.) Also on his way out is D.C. Police Chief Peter Newsham, who announced in late November that he was taking the top cop job in Prince William County. Bowser didn't do much outside searching in finding his replacement, whom she appointed relatively quickly: Robert Contee, a 31-year veteran of the department.

At-Large Councilmember David Grosso is also departing the Wilson Building — well, kind of. Having announced his decision not to seek a third term in late 2019 (fulfilling a promise he made when he first ran for council), Grosso was able to sit back and watch a 24-person battle play out to fill his seat. And the victor was surprisingly close to Grosso: Christina Henderson, a former staffer in his office. Grosso may soon be paying her a visit; he announced this month that he's heading over to Arent Fox, a lobbying shop with a number of local clients.

New faces on the council

Because of what happened this year, the D.C. Council will look quite different next year. Along with Pinto's ascension to the Ward 2 seat, George will be taking the Ward 4 seat and Henderson will occupy an At-Large seat. Together they will make the city's legislature majority-female for the first time since 1998; George and Henderson will also make it majority-Black for the first time since 2012. But they may also help push the council further left, setting up likely clashes with more moderate members over everything from whether taxes on the rich should be increased to whether rent control should be expanded. Still, local progressives suffered a defeat when their preferred candidate, Ed Lazere, was beat by Henderson in November's election.

And there was also this...

D.C. voters kinda somewhat maybe decriminalized magic mushrooms, but an effort to do the same for sex work faltered ... That whole claim that Brooke Pinto was a Russian plant didn't really pan out ... Sports betting isn't paying off ... "Dumpster fire" actually made it into the council's official record ... A D.C. resident made TIME Magazine's "Heroes of 2020" list for sheltering protesters ... Bat lobbyists finally had their way ... Councilmember Gritty could have happened, people ... The D.C. Department of Employment Services didn't do great with unemployment benefits, but it did manage to successfully launch the city's paid family leave program ... A Trump supporter ran for ANC in Ward 8 ... A statue of a Confederate general was pulled down by protesters ... The council passed a bill giving more people who committed crimes when they were young a chance at early release ... Incarcerated felons can now vote in D.C. ... Attorney General Karl Racine sued everyone from the NRA and Trump's inaugural committee to landlords and the D.C. Housing Authority ...and Bowser's house became a favorite destination for protesters this year.

That was 2020. Let's not repeat it, OK?

The Year 2020 in Local Politics

December 29, 2020

The Washington City Paper // Mitch Ryals

Local politics in 2020 started out with its typical brand of shenanigans. Disgraced former Councilmember Harry Thomas Jr. dipped a toe back into public life and hinted at a possible future run for his old Ward 5 seat. Former Ward 2 Councilmember Jack Evans resigned amid scandal to avoid expulsion and then turned around and announced a campaign for his Ward 2 seat (and someone purchased the domain for evans2020.com, which took you to an article about the feds raiding his home). And Mayor Muriel Bowser endorsed New York City Mayor Mike Bloomberg for president despite his legacy of violating the rights of New Yorkers, most of whom are Black or Hispanic, through his expansion of the unconstitutional stop-and-frisk policing tactic.

And then a global pandemic hit. D.C. Council and ANC meetings moved to Zoom. So did campaigns. The feds stiffed D.C. on coronavirus relief funds; the budget debate was a “shit show;” former Councilmember Vincent Orange attempted a comeback, and announced his campaign in an email to the media listing all of his ethics bug-a-boos; the D.C. government released official guidance on rim jobs; speculation over Phil Mendelson’s ascension to the mayor’s office kept LL up at night, and Ward 3 Councilmember Mary Cheh’s car was stolen (subsequently recovered). What a year.

Ward 7 Councilmember Vince Gray said it best: “Goddamn shit’s confusing as a motherfucker, man.”

Here are more of the hits from 2020 in local politics:

The Future (of the Council) Is Female

For the first time in more than 20 years, the D.C. Council will feature more women than men. Three incoming members—Christina Henderson, Janeese Lewis George, and Brooke Pinto—all under 35, replace three men who range in from age from 37 to 67.

Henderson replaces her former boss, At-Large Councilmember David Grosso, who opted not to run for a third term and will become a lobbyist for Arent Fox in 2021. George defeated Ward 4 Councilmember Brandon Todd, who is Mayor Muriel Bowser’s most reliable ally on the Council, in the June primary election and faced little opposition in the general election. And Ward 2 Councilmember Brooke Pinto’s victory in the primary election officially ended Jack Evans’ nearly 30-year reign.

Henderson billed herself as a “pragmatic progressive,” and LL predicts she’ll bring a more measured approach than her former boss. George, a Democratic Socialist, is much further left than Todd, a moderate, who is also taking a job as a lobbyist in post-Council life. And Pinto has pledged to give Ward 2 residents more ethical representation than her predecessor. But it's a low bar.

As the body looks to 2021, councilmembers will tackle a smaller budget than years past with an increasing demand for services and reforms to policing, rent control, and elections.

The End of Evans

After nearly 30 years of exercising his special parking privileges, acquiring free Nats tickets, and breaking ethics rules, Jack Evans' tenure on the D.C. Council is over. But he didn't go down without a fight. About a week after he resigned from the Council to avoid expulsion in January, Evans announced a campaign for his old seat. In the end, Evans didn't even crack 400 votes in the June primary. Evans held onto his position as a national committeeman in the local Democratic party, and he still owes the District's tens of thousands of dollars in fines for his misdeeds.

Taxpayers Fund Campaigns

In the public campaign financing program's first year, D.C. taxpayers spent $3.4 million to fund local campaigns for 36 candidates, seven of whom won their races. George's victory over Todd, and Henderson's victory over 23 other candidates are the most notable victories for publicly funded campaigns. Todd raised a total of $495,645, all of it coming in private contributions, to George's $360,000, most of which came from public financing. Henderson outlasted progressive budget geek Ed Lazere's $481,385 war chest, more than $320,000 of which came from public financing, as well as developer Marcus Goodwin's $411,482 in private contributions.

While Lazere, Goodwin, and Orange traded blows, Henderson rose above the fray with a boost from an expansive mail campaign and an endorsement from the Washington Post editorial board. She'll take office after having won less than 15 percent of the vote and pledged to champion a ranked choice voting system as one of her first priorities next year.

Police and sentencing reform

After civil unrest broke out this summer after a White Minneapolis police officer killed a Black man, George Floyd, by kneeling on his neck, the D.C. Council passed a sweeping police reform bill. Some highlights include quicker access to body camera footage in cases where officers use deadly force and identification of the officers involved, a provision that takes discipline off the table in union contract negotiations, and a ban on the use of rubber bullets and tear gas on peaceful protesters.

For years, the Metropolitan Police Department has refused to either identify officers who killed citizens or and release body camera footage of the fatal encounters. The new law forced MPD to publicize the footage in the deaths of Marquese Alston, D'Quan Young, and Jeffrey Price. MPD also released footage and identified officers involved in the deaths of two young men this year, Deon Kay and Karon Hylton.

The bill passed on a temporary basis, and the Council is expected to consider a permanent version in 2021.

The Council also passed a groundbreaking sentencing reform bill that allows people who committed crimes before age 25, and who served at least 15 years in prison, a shot at release. Curiously, Cheh pushed for amendments that would have tipped the scales against offenders seeking new sentences. When the amendments failed during the bill's first reading, Cheh introduced the same two amendments during second reading. The lawyer and constitutional law professor lost both times.

Personnel shuffle

The most notable departure from Mayor Bowser's administration came with a tinge of scandal. Rashad Young, who served as Bowser's city administrator since she took office in 2015, left for a job at Howard University. But he was slapped with a $2,500 fine on his way out the door for an accidental violation of ethics rules. Young played a role in negotiating a tax break for construction of Howard's new hospital while he was in talks with the university about his new job.

Deputy Mayor for Public Safety and Justice Kevin Donahue is taking over for Young on an interim basis, and Dr. Robert Mitchell, D.C.'s chief medical examiner, is taking Donahue's spot as deputy mayor.

Bowser's chief of staff John Falcicchio is officially pulling double duty now that he's confirmed as the deputy mayor for planning and economic development, replacing Brian Kenner.

And in late November, Prince William County scooped Bowser's office in announcing that MPD Chief Peter Newsham will be their new top cop. Bowser named long time MPD official Robert Contee III as D.C.'s next chief, ignoring calls for community engagement and a national search.

Coronavirus response

The coronavirus touches every aspect of life as we know it. Here are some highlights of how it impacted local politics:

- In July, APM Reports published an account of the ways that the District was slow to help Black residents, who are infected and die from COVID-19 at disproportionately higher rates than other racial and ethnic groups, in the early days of the pandemic.
- Local officials are still fighting for federal relief funds. The CARES Act funds for D.C. came up $755 million short because it counted D.C. as a territory rather than a state. As recently as Dec. 5, Bowser asked President-Elect Joe Biden to grant the extra funding.
- Emails obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request revealed how the Bowser administration manipulated the publication of data to allow Phase Two of reopening to begin. Emails show a communications staffer in the mayor's office directing the health department to delay publication of data showing an increase in community spread, a key metric in determining whether the District could move to Phase Two.

- D.C. Chief Financial Officer Jeff DeWitt's projections in September show the hit to D.C.'s revenue wasn't quite as bad for 2020, but local elected officials are looking at a $782 million budget gap over the next four fiscal years. The Council rejected a proposal to raise income taxes on residents earning $250,000 or more, but the proposal could resurface as the Council looks to revise the budget next year.

Swear & Scatter

December 29, 2020

The Washington City Paper // Tom Sherwood

Every two years, a formal swearing-in is held for newly elected or re-elected D.C. Councilmembers. It is usually a big deal. And by law, it has to take place on Jan. 2.

Normally it's held at the Walter E. Washington Convention Center, where an oversized hall overflows with officials, family, friends, campaign workers, big wig contributors, and irritating wannabes desperately hanging around power. It's a chance for newly electeds to give aspirational speeches (or jokingly acknowledge that some people think you're irritating, as At-Large Councilmember Elissa Silverman did two years ago). Parties are held in the new councilmembers' offices.

But not this year. On Saturday, the 2021 swearing-in ceremony is going to be a COVID-condensed fraction of its normal self because of public safety restrictions.

"This year's ceremony will be drastically different and I am counting on your understanding and cooperation," cautioned Council Secretary Nyasha Smith in one of two stern memos to councilmembers shared with City Paper. Smith knows the councilmembers can show up late or be long-winded. One memo even strongly suggests that incumbent councilmembers not taking oaths are "encouraged to watch the event from the comfort of your home" on TV or online. In short, stay home.

Plans for Saturday still are being tweaked, but the spartan ceremony will begin at 10 a.m. on the broad, exterior steps of the John A. Wilson Building, in good weather or bad, with no seating for councilmembers or guests. Under Mayor Muriel Bowser's public health emergency orders, outdoor events are limited to 25 persons, so each councilmember is limited to seven guests and must stand apart from the ceremony until called. The memos urge the councilmembers to stay out of the John A. Wilson Building entirely and note officers from the city's protective service "will be assisting with crowd control and enforcement." It could get complicated with so many egos involved.

There will be no stage on the steps. One of Smith's memo says, "at no time will all members of the Council be present." Each elected or re-elected member will get just a total of 10 minutes (10 minutes is underlined) to have a judge administer their oath of office, deliver any remarks "if so desired" and depart the steps. That "if so desired" also is in boldface type, a clear suggestion to skip the speeches and leave. The secretary also says regardless of the weather, "we will strictly adhere to the requirements outlined herein."

The truncated ceremony is being held for re-elected At-Large Councilmember Robert White and newly elected at-large member Christina Henderson. They'll be followed by new and re-elected member Brooke Pinto (D-Ward 2), new member Janeese Lewis George (D-Ward 4), and re-elected members Vince Gray (D-Ward 7) and Trayon White (D-Ward 8).

In another break from normal programming, members of the state board of education, advisory neighborhood commissioners, and statehood officers, who also would gather at the convention center, instead will be sworn in using Zoom. Council Chairman Phil Mendelson will officiate those virtual ceremonies at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.

The last full-scale ceremony was two years ago, when Mayor Bowser took the oath for her second term. Like Silverman's self-deprecation, these bi-annual ceremonies have had their moments.

In 1979, newly elected Mayor Marion Barry was sworn in by Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

And in 2007, Ward 3 Councilmember Mary asked then-Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsberg to administer the oath for her. Cheh, a law professor at George Washington University, had sat through all of the 1993 congressional testimony prior to Ginsburg's confirmation. Cheh was stunned that Ginsberg not only said yes, but also asked to be allowed to say a few words. "Say anything you want," Cheh recalls responding.

And just two years ago, in January 2019, Cheh was being sworn-in for her fourth term on the council. She began her speech by acknowledging that everyone was engaging in the long-respected, peaceful transfer of power that marks our local, state and national governments. "Sometimes we take it for granted," Cheh observed then.

Of course, Cheh said all that before this year's ongoing presidential soap opera with which President Trump is not playing along. He has encouraged his supporters to show up next week and protest the Jan. 6 official tabulating of electoral votes. Trump also has left open whether he will violate tradition and refuse to participate in President-elect Joe Biden's inauguration on Jan. 20.

Maybe Council Secretary Smith should send Trump a stern memo.

DC grant program awards thousands to small businesses

December 30, 2020

WTOP // Melissa Howell

As many small businesses struggle to remain open, a grant program in the District will be awarding thousands of dollars to help support 21 businesses in wards 7 and 8.

The local businesses have been selected to receive over $200,000 through D.C.'s Microbusiness Dream Grants Program.

"We support the local businesses that support and invest in our communities and in our residents," said Mayor Muriel Bowser in a statement.

Businesses that will receive $10,000 grants include District Art and Crafts, Lee's Barbershop and Healthy Home Pediatrics.

The grants support businesses with fewer than five full-time employees in growing and achieving sustainability, and also provides technical assistance and training.

"Our small businesses have been resilient during these unprecedented times," said Deputy Mayor for Planning and Economic Development John Falcicchio.

Officials said they hope that the program will provide residents with a fair shot at thriving while alleviating some of the financial burdens during the coronavirus pandemic.

"In these uncertain times, the Dream Grants are another reminder of the Mayor's commitment to reach across the river and into all 8 wards," said Department of Small and Local Business Development Director Kristi Whitfield in a press release.

"Through this grant, these small businesses are not only able to survive, but contribute to the community and help build the local economy."

The grants have awarded more than $700,000 to businesses in wards 7 and 8 since 2018.

Since the pandemic began, the District has made available more than $100 million to help support local businesses and nonprofits through programs like the DC Small Business Microgrant Program and the DC Childcare Provider Relief Fund.

COVID-19 restrictions becoming a party foul for DC restaurants, bars this New Year's Eve
December 29, 2020

WUSA 9 // Matthew Torres

New Year's Eve would normally be a lucrative time of the year for bars and restaurants, but COVID-19 restrictions are creating more of a strain than a celebration.

Under Mayor Muriel Bowser's latest executive order, indoor dining is banned in the District until January 15 due to a "surge of COVID-19 cases that has worsened dramatically in the past month."

The recent changes are on top of another rule that prohibits alcohol sales after 10 p.m.

The combined restrictions have created a dampen for businesses like Shaw's Tavern on Florida Avenue in Northwest, which would normally see packed crowds for their sold-out event on New Year's Eve.

Manager Jake Hoke said while they have been lucky to stay open during the pandemic and understand the importance of reducing the surge of positive cases, ringing in the new year during a pandemic is a sobering reminder of how the industry has been struggling.

"Doing a New Year's Eve celebration that ends at 10 p.m. is very tough," Hoke told WUSA9. "We're doing our best as far as keeping morale high and making sure people get as many hours as possible."

Hoke fears the tavern might have to resort to a limited number of employees again, like when the pandemic first hit in March. Normally, New Year's Eve festivities and the month of December would bring in the big bucks thanks to private parties, but Hoke said they are now losing out on close to a million dollars.

To help celebrate while staying open, Shaw's Tavern is now offering take-home party boxes that include a pizza, a champagne bottle, and noisemakers for $20.21.

Most restaurants in D.C. are taking a similar approach to accommodate people planning to party at home.

Diane Gross of Cork Wine Bar and Market said their boxes will include a dinner, snacks, champagne, party hats, noise makers and breakfast for the next morning. The business would typically seat 120 guests on New Year's Eve but so far, there have only been reservations for 35 people.

Gross is also taking a creative approach by opening at noon that day and start celebrating every hour on the hour.

“It’s New Year’s somewhere. We thought we can have some fun with it because what else can you do?” Gross jokingly questioned.

Cork Wine Bar and Market is the first to receive the Streatery Winter Ready Grant from the city. The business has been surviving thanks to her wine store, but she admits they will miss out on at least $15,000 on Thursday. She considers making $4,000 a win during this time.

“I’m not afraid to put the numbers out there so people can see these are nights restaurants really rely on,” she said.

On top of having to work around the new restrictions this holiday season, owners also expressed concerns about the weather since outdoor seating is only allowed.

DC Launches COVID-19 Vaccine Scheduling Portal for Health Workers

December 29, 2020

The DC Post // Larry Hamilton

The DC Department of Health has rolled out a portal for health care employees in the District to make vaccination appointments.

Appointments can be scheduled through coronavirus.dc.gov/vaccinatedc. Currently, the portal is “only for workers in health care settings that have direct or indirect exposure to infectious materials and cannot telework,” according to a statement released by the office of Mayor Muriel Bowser.

Health care workers are required to document that they are working in the described type of environment in order to register. They must also present proof of their eligibility at the time of their appointment.

“We are launching this portal as a next step in our Vaccination Plan to ensure that those individuals who work in our health care settings and are at highest risk of exposure and infection know where to go to get the vaccine,” said Dr. Ankoor Shah, the District’s COVID-19 Vaccine Program Lead, said in Bowser’s statement.

Shah explained that he acknowledged the public’s great interest in receiving the vaccine, however, the portal should only be used by workers who are part of Phase 1a. “The sooner we get those who work in health care settings vaccinated, the sooner we can move through our other phases and get the rest of our community access to this safe and effective vaccine,” he added.

Those whose appointments are confirmed will be able to get vaccinated at a vaccine access point such as Bread for the City, Community of Hope, Giant, Mary’s Center, Safeway, and Unity Healthcare.

Health staff working at the following institutions are asked to get specific instructions for vaccination from their facilities:

- DC Health
- DC Fire and EMS
- HSC Pediatric Center
- Howard University Hospital
- MedStar Georgetown University Hospital
- MedStar Washington Hospital Center
- Psychiatric Institute of Washington
- Saint Elizabeths Hospital
- The George Washington University Hospital
- United Medical Center
- Children’s National Hospital
- Kaiser Permanente
- National Rehabilitation Hospital

Sibley Memorial Hospital

DC's COVID-19 Vaccination Program kicked off on Monday, December 14, 2020 with the inoculation of health care employees with the highest risk of exposure to the infectious disease.

DC Health's scheduling portal will be updated to include other populations in the coming months as part of the city's phased Vaccination Plan.

D.C. program to warn risky drivers about crashes

December 29, 2020

The Washington Times // Emily Zantow

The District is preparing to conduct a pilot program aimed at reducing traffic collisions by sending warning messages to drivers deemed to be highly likely to be involved in a crash.

Officials are planning to identify high-risk drivers using statistics from the District's Automated Traffic Enforcement System, which takes photos and videos of cars that run red lights, roll past stop signs and exceed the speed limit. Drivers who commit such violations may receive a citation.

"Evidence from multiple jurisdictions suggests that drivers with multiple violations are more likely to be involved in traffic crashes, and that a small number of drivers are responsible for a large number of crashes," according to the website for The Lab @ D.C., an agency within Mayor Muriel Bowser's office that is leading the project.

As part of the research initiative, a group of randomly assigned high-risk motorists will receive customized messages that might address their previous violations and the potential risk of a fatal crash.

The number of red light and speed violations, as well as crashes from the group of high-risk drivers who receive messages, will then be compared to a group that did not receive messages.

The goal of the "Identifying and Intervening with High Risk Drivers" project is to determine "whether proactive, customized messaging can change driver behavior and make our roads safer," according to the website.

As of Tuesday, the project is reportedly in the "implementation" phase. The results are expected to be released in 2022 and they may be used to help shape programs and policies to help curtail serious crashes.

Several city agencies are listed as program partners, including the District Department of Transportation (DDOT), the D.C. Department of Motor Vehicles and the Metropolitan Police Department.

"Through this study, we hope to see a correlation between education and behavior changes among drivers who repeatedly speed and run red lights, two violations that we know are extremely dangerous for all users of our transportation network," a DDOT spokesperson said in an email.

The program is part of the mayor's commitment to the "Vision Zero" initiative, which aims to eliminate traffic-related deaths and serious injuries in the city by 2024 by using data, education, enforcement and engineering.

“Every life lost on our roadways is one too many,” DDOT Director Jeff Marootian said in a statement on the website. “Under Mayor Bowser’s leadership, we continuously focus our efforts on advancing our Vision Zero goals and creating safer streets, especially in those corridors where fatalities are more frequent.”

City data show that 11 of the 36 fatal traffic crashes this year occurred in Ward 8, which makes up the majority, followed by 10 in Ward 7. Ward 8 also accounted for the majority of fatal crashes last year and in 2018.

In addition, nine of last year’s 36 fatalities were linked to drunken driving, which is a 125% increase compared to 2018, when four such fatalities were recorded, according to a report released Monday by the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments.

The Lab @ D.C. did not respond to requests for information about the project’s cost, the statistics will determine which drivers receive messages and how the messages will be sent.

The agency is an applied research team housed within the Office of the City Administrator that is supported by Arnold Ventures, a philanthropic organization that seeks to help solve public issues.

2011 to $108.2 million in FY 2017, including 41 employees who more than doubled their annual salaries by working overtime. Major contributors were the Metropolitan Police Department and Fire and Emergency Medical Services Department, whose overtime use has been reviewed previously. Also experiencing increases were the Department of Youth Rehabilitation Services (DYRS), the Department of Public Works (DPW), the Department of Forensic Sciences (DFS), and the Department of Corrections (DOC) whose policies and procedures were reviewed by ODCA. Insufficient permanent staff was a common element in three of the four agencies. For instance, DOC has seen extensive growth in the District's inmate population from about 1,600 a few years ago to around 2,100 in September 2017. This growth has required DOC to create, through overtime, about 60 recurring posts daily for safety and security. DFS has kept up with growing responsibilities assigned to its Crime Scene Services Division using overtime. DPW has used existing staff on overtime for parking enforcement along the Street Car route. At DYRS, unauthorized staff absences were a large contributor to overtime use, requiring other staff to work overtime to fill necessary positions. ODCA examined policies and practices on overtime documentation at the four agencies, and found instances of failure to comply with DCHR's

District. In addition, ODCA found internal control deficiencies that included a lack of supervisory reviews, segregation of duties, and program monitoring, and unreliable program data. For example, the inequitable treatment involved some employees parking for free at District-owned and leased facilities throughout the District while others paid for parking through enrollment in the Workplace Parking Program . We also found instances when employees who parked for free should have been taxed on a portion of the parking benefits they received . Neither the Office of the Chief Financial Officer nor DGS took the initiative to address this disparity . While DGS created an infrastructure for the Workplace Parking

Program and collected $2 million in revenue annually during FYs 2014 through 2016, it failed to collect at least $331,684 from employees who received free parking and $26,880 from DHCF, an agency that agreed to pay for parking on behalf of its employees. ODCA tallied these amounts from a sample of just six agencies and a review of agency

MOU payments, and we believe the amount of uncollected revenue is much larger. Our analysis also showed that if the District were to expand the program to additional facilities that currently provide parking spaces at no cost to employees, the District could generate an additional $2 million to $4 million in revenue annually. However

r, the internal control deficiencies identified in our report must first be addressed to minimize loss of revenue and the inequities we identified. Furthermore, the $140 monthly fee that Worksite Parking Program participants pay equates to $7 per day and is approximately 39% lower than the market rate for monthly parking. These low rates may be providing incentiv required documentation to OCP for posting to the Awarded Contracts Database, and went on to state that this had occurred prior to the initiation of our engagement. We acknowledge that the contract is now posted on OCP's publicly-accessible website. However, DOEE should take steps to clear up the misconception identified during the course of this engagement.

ment; specifically, the DMPED contracting officer's belief that only sole-source contracts should be posted to the Awarded Contracts Database. As DOEE is reliant on external agencies to award contracts on its behalf, it is important to ensure that sound policies and procedures reside within DOEE to ensure other external partners appropriately

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. *E.g. Lively v. Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in

That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

ORDERED, that the reconsideration and appeal rights of a party aggrieved by this Order appear below.

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

APPEAL RIGHTS

If you disagree with this Compensation Order you may file an appeal, called an Application For Review, with the Compensation Review Board. The Compensation Review Board is a department within the Labor Standards Bureau of the District of Columbia Department of Employment Services. There is no charge for filing an Application For Review but there are certain procedures that must be followed for your appeal to be processed.

1. An Application for Review, identifying the Compensation Order from which the petitioner appeals, the office that issued the Compensation Order and attaching a copy of the Compensation Order being appealed; and,
2. A Memorandum of Points and Authorities in support of the Application for Review, setting forth the legal and factual basis for the review.

The Application for Review must be filed using the DOES AHD/CRB electronic filing system ("e-filing"). To use this free e-filing system you must register and have an account. The e-filing system and registration information is found at this web site: <http://efile.does.dc.gov>.

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

<sup>3</sup> 7 DCMR 162.2. The USAO Matrix originated with the hourly rates allowed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in Laffey v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 572 F. Supp. 354 (D.D.C. 1983), aff’d in relevant part, 746 F.2d 4 (D.C. Cir. 1984). The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. E.g. Lively v. Flexible Packaging Ass’n, 930 A.2d 984, 988–89 (D.C. 2007).

Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

Case No.: 2019-PSWC-00015

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

<sup>3</sup> 7 DCMR 162.2. The USAO Matrix originated with the hourly rates allowed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in Laffey v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 572 F. Supp. 354 (D.D.C. 1983), aff’d in relevant part, 746 F.2d 4 (D.C. Cir. 1984). The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. E.g. Lively v. Flexible Packaging Ass’n, 930 A.2d 984, 988–89 (D.C. 2007).

Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

APPEAL RIGHTS

If you disagree with this Compensation Order you may file an appeal, called an Application For Review, with the Compensation Review Board. The Compensation Review Board is a department within the Labor Standards Bureau of the District of Columbia Department of Employment Services. There is no charge for filing an Application For Review but there are certain procedures that must be followed for your appeal to be processed.

The Application For Review must be filed and received by the Compensation Review Board within 30 days from the date shown on this Compensation Order's Certificate of Service. An Application for Review must include the following:

1. An Application for Review, identifying the Compensation Order from which the petitioner appeals, the office that issued the Compensation Order and attaching a copy of the Compensation Order being appealed; and,
2. A Memorandum of Points and Authorities in support of the Application for Review, setting forth the legal and factual basis for the review.

The Application for Review must be filed using the DOES AHD/CRB electronic filing system ("e-filing"). To use this free e-filing system you must register and have an account. The e-filing system and registration information is found at this web site: <http://efile.does.dc.gov>.

You must also send a paper copy to the Compensation Review Board of the Application for Review that you filed using the e-filing system. The Compensation Review Board's address is 4058 Minnesota Avenue, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20019. The paper copy of the document must be sent or delivered to the Compensation Review Board within 2 business days after it is e-filed.

More information regarding the procedure for filing an appeal can be found at the Compensation Review Board's website: <https://does.dc.gov/page/compensation-review-board>. The Compensation Review Board's staff can help you register for the e-filing system. ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. *E.g. Lively v. Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

APPEAL RIGHTS

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

Supp. 354 (D.D.C. 1983), aff’d in relevant part, 746 F.2d 4 (D.C. Cir. 1984). The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. E.g. Lively v. Flexible Packaging Ass’n, 930 A.2d 984, 988–89 (D.C. 2007).

Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

The Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act (CMPA) provides for an award of "a reasonable attorney's fee not to exceed 20% of the actual benefit secured" for the successful prosecution of a workers' compensation claim.<sup>1</sup> "Actual benefit secured" . . . means the total established amount of benefits secured by an attorney in connection with a hearing or court proceeding through the date of the compensation order only and shall not include any amount offered in settlement prior to a hearing or future benefits.”<sup>2</sup> A “successful prosecution” means to “obtain an award of compensation exceeding the amount that was formerly awarded, offered, or determined.”

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

In determining the request for an award, I consider the authorities cited above and the following five factors listed in OAH Rule 2956.2:

(a) The nature, novelty, and complexity of the case.

This case had novel legal issues and was complex. A Final Order following mediation was vacated after attorneys became involved. Claimant’s attorneys hired medical experts and conducted discovery in preparation for hearing. Negotiations between the parties continued as a hearing was scheduled and rescheduled several times.

(b) The time and labor required.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

Supp. 354 (D.D.C. 1983), aff’d in relevant part, 746 F.2d 4 (D.C. Cir. 1984). The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. E.g. Lively v. Flexible Packaging Ass’n, 930 A.2d 984, 988–89 (D.C. 2007).

Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

APPEAL RIGHTS ARE ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE

APPEAL RIGHTS

If you disagree with this Compensation Order you may file an appeal, called an Application For Review, with the Compensation Review Board. The Compensation Review Board is a department within the Labor Standards Bureau of the District of Columbia Department of Employment Services. There is no charge for filing an Application For Review but there are certain procedures that must be followed for your appeal to be processed.

1. An Application for Review, identifying the Compensation Order from which the petitioner appeals, the office that issued the Compensation Order and attaching a copy of the Compensation Order being appealed; and,
2. A Memorandum of Points and Authorities in support of the Application for Review, setting forth the legal and factual basis for the review.

The Application for Review must be filed using the DOES AHD/CRB electronic filing system ("e-filing"). To use this free e-filing system you must register and have an account. The e-filing system and registration information is found at this web site: <http://efile.does.dc.gov>.

You must also send a paper copy to the Compensation Review Board of the Application for Review that you filed using the e-filing system. The Compensation Review Board's address is 4058 Minnesota Avenue, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20019. The paper copy of the document must be sent or delivered to the Compensation Review Board within 2 business days after it is e-filed.

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

I issued a Final Order dismissing this case on December 18, 2020, based on ORM's rescission of the Determination and its lump sum payment of $55,325.08.

Pending now is Claimant's petition for attorney fees. ORM argues that no fees should be awarded because it "unilaterally" rescinded the Determination and no "award" has been made.

ORDER GRANTING ATTORNEY FEES

After Claimant filed his appeal of a January 3, 2019, Office of Risk Management (ORM) Determination terminating his temporary total disability (TTD) benefits and after the involvement of his attorneys, ORM rescinded its Determination, paid Claimant a lump sum of $55,325.08 of TTD for January 3, 2019, to June 6, 2020, and resumed continuing TTD.

The Office of Risk Management (ORM) regulations provide that attorney fees under the CMPA “shall be computed at sixty percent (60%) of the most current United States Attorney’s Office Attorney’s Fee Matrix” and shall not exceed 20% of the actual benefits secured as of the issuance date of the compensation order.<sup>3</sup>

In Henderson v. District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals followed federal cases holding that the attorneys’ hourly rates should be calculated according to the prevailing rates in the relevant community.<sup>4</sup> The appropriate hourly rate would then be multiplied by the number of reasonable hours to compute the “lodestar,” the presumptive award.

Thomas Martin, who has practiced law since 2007, is a Partner in the firm Goldblatt Martin Pozen, LLP. Attorney Martin entered his appearance on June 26, 2019 and worked 37.75 hours on this case. Kevin Hilgers, an Associate in the Firm, has practiced since 2012. Attorney Hilgers worked 87.25 hours and Rachele Hilgers, an

<sup>3</sup> 7 DCMR 162.2. The USAO Matrix originated with the hourly rates allowed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in Laffey v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., 572 F. Supp. 354 (D.D.C. 1983), aff’d in relevant part, 746 F.2d 4 (D.C. Cir. 1984). The Matrix provides a schedule of hourly rates prevailing in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan area for attorneys at various levels of experience. It has been approved by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals for awards in cases where attorney’s fees are permitted by statute. E.g. Lively v. Flexible Packaging Ass’n, 930 A.2d 984, 988–89 (D.C. 2007).

Associate, worked 0.25 hours. The total of 174 hours worked on this case was reasonable.

(c) The amount of benefits awarded.

The TTD award paid through the date of the Final Order was $55,325.08.

(d) Customary local charges for similar services.

According to the Attorney's Fee Matrix,<sup>5</sup> the hourly rate for Attorney Martin is $510, based on the attorney's years of practice. Sixty per cent of his total for 37.75 hours would be $11,551.50. According to the Matrix, the hourly rate for Attorney Hilgers was $433. For the 87.25 hours worked, 60% his total would be $22,667.50.

(e) The professional qualifications of the attorney or other representative.

Attorney Martin has practiced law for more than 13 years; Attorney Hilgers has practice eight years, representing clients in litigation.

I find that the total hours expended, 174, are reasonable. Contrary to ORM's assertions, it did not rescind the Determination on its own. That rescission followed months of legal work for Claimant, including retaining an expert and conducting discovery. The "award" in this case was the payment ORM made in a lump sum followed by a Final Order dismissing the case.

The attorneys seek $11,065.02, below the customary local charges typical hourly rate. The amount the attorney seeks is 20% of the TTD award of $55,325.08, as limited by regulation.<sup>6</sup>

Therefore, it is this 28th day of December 2020:

ORDERED, that pursuant to D.C. Code § 1-623.27(b)(2), Respondent shall pay Claimant's attorney Thomas B. Martin reasonable attorney's fees in the amount of $11,065.02; and it is

ORDERED, that the reconsideration and appeal rights of a party aggrieved by this Order appear below.

After an administrative law judge has issued a Final Order, a party may ask the judge to change the Final Order and ask the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to change the Final Order. There are important time limitations described below for doing so.

HOW TO REQUEST THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE TO CHANGE THE FINAL ORDER

Under certain limited circumstances and within certain time limits, a party may file a written request asking the administrative law judge to change a final order. OAH Rule 2828 explains the circumstances under which such a request may be made. Rule 2828 and other OAH rules are available at www.oah.dc.gov.

A request to change a final order does not affect the party's obligation to comply with the final order and to pay any fine or penalty. If a request to change a final order is received at OAH within 10 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (15 calendar days if OAH mailed the final order to you), the period for filing an appeal with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals does not begin to run until the Administrative Law Judge rules on the request. A request for a change in a final order will not be considered if it is received at OAH more than 120 calendar days of the date the Final Order was filed (125 calendar days if OAH mailed the Final Order to you).

PLEASE NOTE: By the October 9, 2020 Order of the Chief Administrative Law Judge, all filing deadlines that would otherwise expire during the public health emergency, as declared by the Mayor, are suspended/tolled/extended. Upon the expiration of the public health emergency, the Chief Administrative Law Judge will issue an order ending the suspension/tolling/extension period and parties will have thirty calendar days to timely submit any outstanding filings.

MJ Audit Approach and Overall Status

Our Audit Approach

Our approach focuses more on areas of greatest risks by analyzing audit risks, setting materiality thresholds based on audit risk analysis, and developing audit programs that allocate a larger portion of audit resources to high-risk areas. During your audit, we also determine effectiveness and adequacy of your internal controls for ensuring proper financial accountability, efficient operations, and compliance.

IT AUDIT

Evaluate controls over the IT environment and use data extraction software, where applicable, to audit transactions through your financial information system.

MJ Audit Approach and Overall Status

Our Audit Approach

Our approach focuses more on areas of greatest risks by analyzing audit risks, setting materiality thresholds based on audit risk analysis, and developing audit programs that allocate a larger portion of audit resources to high-risk areas. During your audit, we also determine effectiveness and adequacy of your internal controls for ensuring proper financial accountability, efficient operations, and compliance.

IT AUDIT

Evaluate controls over the IT environment and use data extraction software, where applicable, to audit transactions through your financial information system.

MJ Audit Approach and Overall Status

Our Audit Approach

Our approach focuses more on areas of greatest risks by analyzing audit risks, setting materiality thresholds based on audit risk analysis, and developing audit programs that allocate a larger portion of audit resources to high-risk areas. During your audit, we also determine effectiveness and adequacy of your internal controls for ensuring proper financial accountability, efficient operations, and compliance.

IT AUDIT

Evaluate controls over the IT environment and use data extraction software, where applicable, to audit transactions through your financial information system.

MJ Audit Approach and Overall Status

Our Audit Approach

Our approach focuses more on areas of greatest risks by analyzing audit risks, setting materiality thresholds based on audit risk analysis, and developing audit programs that allocate a larger portion of audit resources to high-risk areas. During your audit, we also determine effectiveness and adequacy of your internal controls for ensuring proper financial accountability, efficient operations, and compliance.

IT AUDIT

Evaluate controls over the IT environment and use data extraction software, where applicable, to audit transactions through your financial information system.

During a year marked by protests for racial justice and a deadly pandemic that has disproportionately killed and sickened Black and Latino people across the District, books about racism rose to the top of reading lists in the city.

After the police killing of George Floyd in Minneapolis and as protests for racial justice erupted in city streets, readers sought titles about anti-racism, privilege and white supremacy from the D.C. Public Library. The interest extended into fiction, where books that deal with race were among the most popular.

“People wanted to go deeper into some of the issues that are plaguing us,” Richard Reyes-Gavilan, executive director of D.C. Public Library. “This is what imaginative works, whether fiction or nonfiction, provides people. A better understanding of our world, a better understanding of ourselves.”

In the first two weeks of May, copies of five e-books about race — White Fragility, How To Be An Antiracist, Me And White Supremacy, The New Jim Crow and So You Want to Talk About Race — were downloaded a total of 120 times. In the last two weeks of that same month, they were downloaded 1,242 times, according to DCPL.

The demand prompted the library system to provide unlimited e-book copies of some of the most in demand books on race in the country. Interest in several books about racism peaked in late May and early June but interest held steady throughout the year — by the end of 2020, books about race were among the most borrowed.

The pandemic forced the D.C. Public Library to adapt as readers’ habits changed.

The library system shuttered its more than two dozen locations in March after Mayor Muriel Bowser issued a stay-at-home order. Some libraries reopened for limited in-person services in late June but reverted to curbside services this month as coronavirus cases surged. Other locations have remained closed throughout the pandemic.

But demand for library services did not waver.

In the month after the coronavirus pandemic forced schools, businesses and workplaces to shut, 7,000 people in D.C. signed up for library cards. Bon Appétit was among the most popular magazines borrowed from D.C. libraries, another potential sign people were spending more time in their kitchens.

More people used LinkedIn, a job networking website, and Lynda, which provides online training courses, through the library system as the city grappled with higher levels of unemployment.

Borrowing of physical books shrank dramatically. Readers relied on e-books and audiobooks more than they ever did, reaching nearly 1.3 million downloads.

Here's a list of D.C. Public Library's most popular books in 2020.

DCHFA Finances New Affordable Development in Takoma

December 28, 2020

Yahoo Finance // Staff

218 Vine Street Rendering by: KTG Architecture + Planning
Washington, D.C., Dec. 28, 2020 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- During the holiday season the District of Columbia Housing Finance Agency (DCHFA) continued to finance affordable housing throughout the District. On December 22 DCHFA issued $21.5 million in tax-exempt bond financing and underwrote $9.8 million in four percent low income housing tax credits (LIHTC) for a new development at 218 Vine Street in Ward 4's Takoma neighborhood. "The development of 218 Vine Street will provide a new 100 percent affordable rental housing community in a thriving neighborhood with access to transportation, where affordable housing has dwindled. Residents at all income levels should have the opportunity to be a part of all communities," stated Christopher E. Donald, Interim Executive Director, DCHFA. The $41.7 million development will bring 129 apartments that will be leased at 60 percent of area median income or below and will be located two blocks from the Takoma Metro Station. 218 Vine St is a twinning transaction that combined 4 percent LIHTC for 92 units and 9 percent LIHTC for the remaining 37 units. The DC Department of Housing and Community Development is providing a $13 million loan from its Housing Production Trust Fund for 218 Vine Street.

Jair Lynch Real Estate Partners and Housing Up are the developers of 218 Vine Street. Resident amenities will include a business center, community room, on-site management, a fitness center, 25 parking spaces and all units will have Energy Star appliances.

Housing Up will also provide on-site programming for residents in four target areas: (1) Tenant Education, (2) Health and Wellness, (3) Education and Employment, and (4) Community Building. The DC Department of Human Services (DHS) will provide on-site case management services for the residents of the 24 Permanent Supportive Housing units. Their services will be funded separately by DHS.

Through its Multifamily Lending and Neighborhood Investment and Capital Markets divisions, DCHFA issues tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds to lower the developers' costs of acquiring, constructing and rehabilitating rental housing. The Agency offers private for-profit and non-profit developers low cost predevelopment, construction and permanent financing that supports the new construction, acquisition, and rehabilitation of affordable rental housing in the District.

The District of Columbia Housing Finance Agency is an S&P A + rated issuer, serving Washington, D.C.'s residents for more than 40 years. The Agency's mission is to advance the District of Columbia's housing priorities; the Agency invests in affordable housing and neighborhood development, which provides pathways for D.C. residents to transform their lives. We accomplish our mission by delivering the most efficient and effective sources of capital available in the market to finance rental housing and to create homeownership opportunities.

Hotel Harrington, Harry's bar to close during planned January demonstrations

December 29, 2020

FOX 5 // Staff

Hotel Harrington and Harry's bar – magnets for right-wing protesters who've flocked to D.C. for pro-Trump presidents in recent months – will be closed during the next planned demonstration.

The hotel posted a statement on its Facebook page on Monday indicating that it will close Jan. 4, 5 and 6.

Last week, the Washington Post reported that activists were planning protests that weekend – when Congress is slated to certify the results of the election.

Protesters have poured into D.C. twice since the election to protest the results, which indicated that former Vice President Joe Biden had defeated President Donald Trump.

Harry's has been the scene of multiple incidents – including an investigation by police responding to complaints of COVID-19 restriction violations, and violent confrontations between protesters, including stabbings, outside the bar's walls.

The hotel says those who have made pre-paid reservations will receive refunds.

The hotel will still accommodate long-term guests.

Man Arrested For Two DC Murders — 22 Years Apart

December 28, 2020

NBC 4 // Pat Collins

A Southeast D.C. man has been arrested for two murders, one that occurred in 1996 and the other 22 years later in 2018, bringing both cold cases to a close.

Rashee Young, 42, is accused of first degree murder while armed and second degree murder while armed in the cases of Cedric Rodgers and Ronald William Richardson, Jr.

Rodgers, 26, was found suffering from gunshot wounds on the night of June 11, 1996 in a playground by D.C. police. He was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Richardson Jr., 39, was also found suffering from multiple gunshots on the morning of May 20, 2018 by D.C. police, in an apartment down the street from the murder that took place 22 years earlier. He was unresponsive and was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Richardson Jr. was one of seven children. Of his four sisters and two brothers, he was the pride and joy of his father.

When he was young, his family said Richardson Jr. had a troubled life. As he grew older they say he could not resist the lure of the street.

"It drew him to trouble," Richardson's Jr.'s sister, Vonda McClary-Logan, said.

His father was destroyed by the death of his favorite son, killed by a man he knew.

"Even though he was here physically for a while, mentally he was already gone after my brother was found murdered," McClary-Logan said.

It took years, but eventually the evidence oozed out. According to court records, detectives found witnesses and other information they didn't have years and years ago.

Young has numerous prior arrests that include assault with intent to kill, possession with intent to distribute crack cocaine, murder, assault on a police officer and tampering with physical evidence, police said.

This is an ongoing investigation that the police is still working to get WUSA9 information for.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA WATER AND SEWER AUTHORITY | 1385 CANAL STREET, SE | WASHINGTON, DC 20003

The Honorable Muriel Bowser
Mayor of the District of Columbia
1350 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20004

Dear Mayor Bowser:

I am writing to provide the requested weekly update on the actions DC Water is taking in response to the September 10th extreme weather event.

DC Water has approved 378 backwater valve requests since September 10th, and to date have received 52 reimbursement requests for the approved installations. The program has transitioned to permit direct payment of allowable installation costs up to the limit of $6,000. Additionally, sewer system evaluation to determine source of inflow of rainwater into the separate sewers on Nicholson Street will begin mid-January 2021, after residents and other stake holders receive notification and a description of the work. This work is a recommendation in our after-action report.

We have transmitted our After-Action Report to HSEMA with the understanding that it will be shared with you. We look forward to addressing any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

DC Water Weekly Report #14
December 28th, 2020
September 10th Storm Event

This report will be provided weekly to provide information on the status of DC Water’s response to the September 10, 2020 flooding event.

Impacted Properties and Recurring Concerns

Based on records compiled from DC Water and HSEMA, we have documented a total of 392 impacted locations:

| Source                                | Number of Contacts/Locations               |
|---------------------------------------|--|
| DC Water Service Requests/Work Orders | 264 (38 are intersections)                 |
| HSEMA Canvassing Efforts              | 373 unique locations (580 contact records) |

Damage_Severity (Blank) Major Minor Moderate

One recurring concern noted through the community engagement process is the amount of time it is taking for claims to be paid related to emergency clean-up. While DC Water has contracted with two vendors to provide emergency clean up relief, we also offered those residents that had undertaken the work themselves, the opportunity to have those services reimbursed through the claims process up to the approved limit of $5000. Due to the number of claims received overall, processing claims has been delayed. DC Water engaged the third-party adjuster to provide additional staff for claims reviews with a goal of having those clean up related claims resolved by January 31st. Total customer reimbursement claims paid to date $206,732.

Remediation Services

Remediation services are being provided by two vendors: ServePro and Service Master. The number of homes remediated, and the value of remediation services captured to date are shown in the following table.

| Total Number of Requests for Remediation Services | Number of Residences Served | Total Value of Remediation Services (To Date) | Pending Requests (Scheduled/ No Return Call) |
|---|-----------------------------|---|--|
| 175*  | 166                         | $540,471.81                                | 9   |

- No new requests received

\*Invoices received for 162 properties. The remaining invoices are currently being processed by the vendors*

Claims Data

Cleaning

| Total Number of Claims Filed | Total Value of Damages Reported by Customers |
|------------------------------|--|

Property Damage

| Total Number of Claims Filed | Total Value of Claims |
|------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 72                         | $482,800             |

*This number is based on the expected $5,000 maximum payout. Our goal is to complete cleaning payouts by 1/31/21. Payouts are dependent upon the customer's timely and appropriate receipt submission in addition to the return of their signed agreement. We have paid $206,732 to date.

**72 of the 276 claimants have requested reimbursement for their property loss or damage and have reported estimated values. There are several claims noted as "unknown" costs.

Community Engagement

The team has nearly finalized our follow-up responses for all previously rejected customers who requested a second round of review of their eligibility for our BWV program (8 total requests received to date). We will be following up with these customers via email this week. Specifically, there is one customer we have decided to approve for the program after further consideration; we will be asking another customer for additional evidence of backups before making a final determination; and we confirmed the rest of the customers are not eligible.

OMAC continues to communicate with customers about the Backwater Valve and Emergency Clean-up programs, including the following email correspondence:

- Receiving/Reviewing submitted applications following completion of the BWV installation - 5 emails
- Fielding new incoming requests- 2 emails
- Checking on the status of pending requests, or following up with customers to obtain or provide additional information regarding their pending requests – 4 emails
- Checking on the status of rebate checks – 6 emails
- Sending out emails to newly approved customers – 6 emails
- Sending the information on the alternative (payment to the plumber) option to previously approved customers – 1 emails
- Sending out rejection emails – 10 emails
- Provide some general guidance to approved customers during the application process – 4 emails
- Speaking with approved customers about the alternative (payment to the plumber) option- 1 total emails
- Providing general information about the BWV program- 2 emails

The Outreach Manager also spoke by phone with about 9 customers over the past week, either inquiring about a pending BWV request, rejected customers requiring additional information, requesting information on the alternative (payment to plumber) option, thanking him for his assistance, requesting some guidance about the application process or how the program works overall, complaints about the BWV or cleanup assistance program, status of pending claims, or new callers checking to see if they qualify for the BWV program.

Backwater Valve Program

The Backwater Valve Program eligibility criteria has been updated to include all residential properties in the combined sewer area that have experienced basement backups previously, those that were previously approved but did not install a device, and those outside the combined sewer area in the Valley Drive sewershed (Nicholson Lane) that were impacted by the September 10 storm event. The requests are being reviewed by DC Water's engineers to determine if the installation of the backwater valve is appropriate for the property.

As of December 28, 2020, we have received a total 378 requests since September 10th and approved 284 requests. Of the 378 requests received, 73 did not get approved. 21 are pending review. DC Water has received 52 reimbursement requests and have processed 38 to date.

5 Things That Rocked The Legal Industry In 2020

From a pandemic-induced transformation of lawyers' working arrangements to a renewed focus on diversity and empowerment informed by a racial justice movement, here are five moments and trends that shook the legal industry in 2020.

Biden's Win Means Big Business For BigLaw

BigLaw is likely to see a boom in business under Joe Biden's presidency, with attorneys and law firm leaders anticipating a bevy of new federal regulation and enforcement actions that will have clients calling for advice.

The Biggest Legal Ethics Moments Of 2020

Attorneys in 2020 were given more flexibility to financially assist clients and to recruit nonlawyers as part of their law firms, while some lawyers and judges got slapped for stepping outside boundaries of legal ethics guidelines.

The 2020 Law360 Glass Ceiling Report

The Law360 2020 Glass Ceiling Report shows that law firms continue to make only minimal progress in their efforts to dispel the barriers women face, especially as they move up the ranks.

The 2020 Diversity Snapshot

The Law360 2020 Diversity Snapshot reveals a legal industry determined to move the needle but succeeding at a glacial pace, with firms struggling to tackle a lack of diversity that only increases as attorneys climb the ranks.

“These Proud Boys are avowed white nationalists and have been called to stand up against a fair and legal election,” D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) said. And D.C. Council Chairman Phil Mendelson (D) said a beautiful weekend “was ruined by white supremacists who came to our city seeking violence.”

Here Are Our Favorite Happy Moments From 2020 \(They Exist!\)

WAMU/DCist // Staff

Even in a post about happiness, there's no getting around it: 2020 has been a difficult, if not heartbreaking, year for many people. Hundreds of thousands of people lost their lives during an unprecedented pandemic. The presidential election pitted Americans against one another and tested the limits of our increasingly fragile democracy. Communities across the country erupted in anger and grief over police killings of Black and brown people.

There were also beautiful, bright moments that sustained us through the darkest times. The Washington community banded together in unprecedented ways to fight the pandemic. Frontline workers risked their own health to keep the rest of us healthy, safe and fed. Neighbors helped neighbors, strangers helped strangers, and you probably adopted a dog.

Let's give these moments of joy their due. Without further ado, here are some of our happiest moments of 2020.

January: A Month That Happened

Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41st) presides over the Virginia House of Delegates in January.

We want to be very honest with you: We remember very little about January. Turns out, it did actually happen. Time passed and things occurred, including Virginia Democrat Eileen Filler-Corn's swearing in as the first woman and first Jewish Speaker of the House of Delegates in the legislature's 400-year history.

We also spent a lot of time in January pleasantly debating the best Metro seat, thanks to a meme out of New York.

February: Go-Go Goes Official

Crowds follow a go-go band on a truck moving down 16th Street towards Black Lives Matter Plaza in June.

D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser signed legislation in February that made go-go the official music of the District. It marked more than just a symbolic win: The bill required the mayor's office to implement programs to support and archive go-go music and its history. The celebratory bill-signing also highlighted the collective strength of D.C.'s go-go musicians, fans and anti-gentrification activists. #DontMuteDC, people.

Meanwhile, the reigning World Series champs smashed cabbages at spring training.

March: Nice Man Rides Pretty Horse

RaShaod Crosson and his noble steed, Ellie, stop for a photo with D.C. children and police.

Just as the pandemic hit Washington, a hero arrived. On March 10, RaShaod Crosson, 29, mounted his horse Ellie at RFK Stadium and galloped around town, leaving many residents giddily wondering what the heck was going on. A former D.C. Public Schools student and a veteran, Crosson grew up in Southwest and now co-owns a horseback-riding farm in Brandywine, Md. “There are a lot of children who have never seen a horse in person,” he told DCist.

Soon after, lockdown orders went into effect and Washingtonians began inventing new ways to stay connected. These Mt. Pleasant neighbors hosted stoop sing-a-longs and socially distant scavenger hunts to keep each other smiling.

April: Nature Wins, For Once

The view from 550 feet in the air, looking west.

Remember all those stories about how global carbon emissions dropped dramatically due to travel restrictions? The local environment benefitted, too. The absence of spring tourists gave the National Mall’s notoriously troubled grass a moment to do its thing, and frankly it’s never looked better. The turf grew long and luscious, JVN-style.

Then, after a month-long hiatus in marriage license processing caused by you-know-what, D.C.’s Superior Court started approving applications again. Judges and clerks began learning how to do virtual weddings to keep up with the increased demand.

May: Art With A Message

Arlington artist OnRaé LaTeal infuses existing protest chants with hip-hop.

The protests against police brutality that began at the end of May following the police killing of George Floyd inspired a lasting racial justice movement that swept across America. Artists came to play a key role in the protests, especially here in D.C. By early June the fence surrounding the White House was covered in protest art. Go-go bands showed up on open-top buses to energize crowds. Music by local artists like OnRaé LaTeal of Arlington (above) provided a soundtrack with a social justice bent.

Throughout the pandemic, artists have demonstrated their resilience and creativity. Street artists kept painting murals, singers kept writing songs and actors kept performing, albeit in new ways.

June: Statehood And Snapping Turtles

D.C. Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton celebrates outside the Capitol Building in June.

June 26 marked a historic day for the District: The House passed a D.C. statehood bill for the first time in either chamber of Congress’s history. Though the bill wouldn’t go on to become a law this year, the vote helped garner national attention for D.C.’s decades-long fight for representation (and spawned a WAMU podcast, 51st).

Meanwhile, ours jaws collectively dropped after looking at pictures of the 65-pound alligator snapping turtle found wandering through Alexandria. Lord Fairfax, as he came to be known, was handed over to the Virginia Zoo in Norfolk to live out his Earth days in peace before returning to the Underworld from whence he came.

July: Washington's Football Team Does One Good Thing
Time for a fresh start.

In June the football franchise announced it would retire its name, a racial slur for Native Americans. The decision came in the midst of a broader national conversation about racial inequality in the United States and pressure from corporate sponsors. Twitter commenters and graphic designers started coming up with logo design and name ideas like the Washington Redhawks, Redtails and Redwolves (we're sensing a theme here...).

Baseball returned later in the month, and the Nationals tapped Dr. Anthony Fauci to throw out the first pitch of the abbreviated season. In related news, Fauci decided not to quit his day job.

August: Pageant Queens Remind Us What Real Beauty Is Elvera Patrick, right, and Hadiyah Muhammad both say they have been drawn to pageants as a way to strengthen sisterhood. "We are friends. We don't bash each other," Muhammad says. "I tell her what she should improve for the pageant, and she tells me."

Beauty pageants aren't just for the young. Elvera Patrick, 65, and Hadiyah Muhammad, 66, inspired us with their story of how they became pageant queens and close friends. "We don't bash each other," Muhammad told DCist. "I tell her what she should improve for the pageant, and she tells me. We are two queens together." Patrick designs and sews almost every outfit for herself and Muhammad. The two love the pageant scene so much that their granddaughters and great-granddaughters now compete right alongside them. Friendship goals!

Meanwhile, first-time entrepreneurs around the region opened or grew some really cool businesses, like the plant subscription business Grounded, a company that brings an alpaca to your party, a puzzle company with diverse characters for kids, a vegan candle business launched by a 15-year-old, and a candle business that went viral after the founder's boyfriend made an amazing hype video.

September: All The Pets Always 4ever

By this point in the year, we'd guess that nearly every Washingtonian had A) adopted a pet, B) was on a waitlist to adopt a pet, and/or C) knew at least three people with newly adopted pets. The furry new housemates provided much-needed routine and companionship amid socially isolated days. "It made quarantine less about us and our fears, and more about taking care of someone else and finding peace through that," Kelly Granger told DCist about adopting her dog Ruthie during the pandemic. Check out some of the pets adopted by DCist and WAMU staff in the slideshow above.

September also marked the reopening of D.C.'s central public library after three years of renovations. Now it has a slide! Plus, D.C.-area parks welcomed a record number of visitors.

October: BABY PANDA BABY PANDA BABY PANDA

He's finally cute.

You might be wondering why we waited until October to post a panda picture, since the National Zoo's baby panda was born in August. But take a quick look back at what the cub looked like when he was born and you'll understand why we waited. It took until October for baby Xiao Qi Ji (which translates to "little miracle" in English) to finally get cute. But when he did, he sure didn't disappoint.

In non-mammal news, the new museum Planet Word opened in D.C.'s historic Franklin School building. The long-anticipated language museum features, for one, an exhibit with a booming-voiced narrator intoning the word jorts.

November: Janky Dinosaurs Take Over RFK Stadium
Hold on to your butts.

A drive-through dinosaur exhibition called Jurassic Quest arrived in D.C. in November, and oh was it a sight to behold.

Visitors (and there were a lot of them, because what else can you do with your kids during a pandemic?) discovered the wonders of the prehistoric era by driving down needlessly narrow paths outlined by hundreds of traffic cones in the RFK Stadium parking lot. The exhibition featured massive, creaking animatronic dinosaurs and explanatory signs held down by garbage bags full of sand. Jurassic Quest provided just the type of silly, COVID-safe fun we needed.

Meanwhile, no big deal or anything but America elected its first female, first Black and first South Asian vice president-elect (and Joe Biden).

December: Santa! I Know Him!

The pandemic raged on, but that didn't mean Christmas was cancelled. Professional Kris Kringles like Tom Carroll (above) from Virginia donned face masks, protective shields, and even giant plastic bubbles to keep spreading holiday cheer. Then, Christmas elf-turned-renowned-immunologist Dr. Anthony Fauci announced he had personally vaccinated Santa, everyone got all the presents they asked for and we all lived happily ever after.

Or something like that.

Here Were the DC Area's 20 Most Memorable Stories of 2020

December 23, 2020

NBC 4 // Carissa DiMargo, Andrea Swalec & Sophia Barnes

Between the devastation of the coronavirus pandemic, a renewed racial justice movement and an election that will unseat President Donald Trump, it's been a monumental news year in Washington, D.C., and our region.

Here are the top 20 local stories that captivated readers and viewers in 2020.

First COVID-19 Cases Diagnosed in DC, Maryland and Virginia in March

At first, there were just three people in the D.C. area who were known to have COVID-19. A woman in her 50s and a married couple in their 70s, all from Montgomery County, Maryland, fell ill after taking a cruise in Egypt, officials announced on March 5. Two days later, a U.S. Marine at Fort Belvoir in Virginia was announced to be positive, along with with the first two cases in D.C., those of a church rector and an international visitor to the city.

In the span of 10 days, the number of confirmed cases jumped from two to nearly 150.

First COVID-19 Restrictions and Stay-at-Home Orders Enacted

D.C., Maryland and Virginia each issued stay-at-home orders on March 30, directing residents to only leave home for essential reasons such as buying food or medical care. The orders radically changed how restaurants, stores, gyms and day cares operated, and whether residents could get haircuts, go to movie theaters or take in-person college classes, to name just a few elements of daily life.

Federal workers were allowed to telework, grocery stores set certain hours for seniors and vulnerable shoppers, and zoos, libraries, museums and courtrooms all closed.

When the stay-at-home orders went into effect, 2,834 people in D.C., Maryland and Virginia had the virus and 51 had died. By the time Christmas was approaching, more than 545,000 people had been diagnosed with the virus and more than 10,000 had died in the region.

DC Creates Black Lives Matter Plaza, Paints Huge Letters on Street

The city of D.C. echoed many residents' calls for justice by naming a portion of 16th Street. just north of the White House, Black Lives Matter Plaza.

Mayor Muriel Bowser's administration had the words painted in yellow letters from curb to curb early on the morning of June 5. The lettering is so large that the message stretches onto two city blocks and can only fit into a single photo frame from high above.

"We want to call attention today to making sure our nation is more fair and more just, and that Black lives and that Black humanity matter in our nation," Bowser said.

A green street sign reading Black Lives Matter Plaza was affixed to a lamp post outside St. John's Church, where days earlier federal forces used munitions and pepper spray to clear peaceful protesters and make way for President Donald Trump to pose for photos.

Cyclist Arrested for Assaults on People Posting Racial Justice Flyers Along Maryland Trail
A cyclist was caught on video and then sought by police for gripping a young woman's arm as he ripped a racial justice flyer out of her hand along the Capital Crescent Trail in Bethesda in June. One of two other young people with her told News4 the man rammed him with his bike and pinned him to the ground.

One victim, who asked to remain anonymous, said he and others were posting flyers in support of the George Floyd protests when they came across the cyclist. Once the video spread online, internet sleuths tried to identify the cyclist and falsely accused multiple men, tarring their reputations online.

Anthony Brennan III, 60, of Kensington, Maryland, was arrested within days. Brennan pleaded guilty in mid-December to three counts of second-degree assault and is set to be sentenced in February.

Maryland Man Arrested for Having 60 People Over for Bonfire, Violating Social Distancing Orders

A Charles County, Maryland, man who threw a party at his house in late March was arrested after authorities said he refused to comply with Gov. Larry Hogan's order banning large gatherings.

Shawn Marshall Myers, 41, was arrested after officers found about 60 people hanging out around a bonfire at his home in Hughesville, the county sheriff's office said.

The sheriff's office said it was the second time Myers had hosted a large gathering since the governor's emergency order banning gatherings of more than 10 people went into effect. Deputies responded to his house on March 22 after receiving another complaint about a party.

Mystery Seeds Possibly From China Are Mailed to Virginia Residents

Several Virginia residents said they received unsolicited packages of seeds that officials believed could be from China, the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services said in July. The recipients said they didn't know what the seeds were or who sent them.

The seeds were sent in the mail, appeared to have "Chinese writing" on them and could be an invasive species, the department said. Officials asked that people not plant the seeds or dispose of them on their own.

Recipients were later instructed to send the seeds to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. An investigation with the Department of Homeland Security's Customs and Border Protection was underway.

D.C.-Area Schools Close Down as Pandemic Worsens

Officials announced closures in March that were expected to be temporary before the lasting impact of the pandemic began to be seen. Initially, the governors of Maryland and Virginia said public schools would be closed through March 27.

When later announcing that all K-12 schools would remain closed through "at least" the academic year, Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam reflected on the deepening crisis, noting, "We are in this for months, not weeks."

While some D.C.-area school districts began phasing into hybrid models this fall, some have already had to scale back from their plans.

José Andrés Closes DC-Area Restaurants, Set Up Community Kitchens

Renowned Spanish-American chef José Andrés announced in mid-March that he would shut down all of his restaurants in the D.C. area and open "community kitchens" to help people in need.

The restaurants, including Oyamel and Zaytinya, were closed to make way for areas to serve lunch. Scores of people lined up outside.

Washington Football Team Drops Longtime Name After Decades of Pressure

Washington's NFL team announced in July that it will change its name, following decades of pressure to stop using a dictionary-defined racial slur.

Arguably the most polarizing name in North American professional sports, it was cut at a time of reckoning over racial injustice, iconography and racism in the United States.

"Dan Snyder and Coach Rivera are working closely to develop a new name and design approach that will enhance the standing of our proud, tradition-rich franchise and inspire our sponsors, fans and community for the next 100 years," the team said in a statement.

The team was still called simply the Washington Football Team as the end of 2020 approached.

Biden, Harris Win Historic 2020 Election

After more than three tense days of vote counting, Joe Biden was projected to win Pennsylvania and therefore the presidency, defeating President Donald Trump. Within seconds of the race being called, a group at Black Lives Matter plaza outside the White House erupted in cheers.

With the victory, Kamala Harris made history as the first Black woman and the first person of South Asian descent elected as vice president of the United States, shattering barriers that have kept men — almost all of them white — entrenched at the highest levels of American politics.

That night, the pair addressed the people of the United States. A theme Biden repeated throughout his victory speech was that the vitriol and hatred between Americans must end if the country is to endure.

"I'm a proud Democrat, but I will govern as an American president. I'll work as hard for those who didn't vote for me as those who did. Let this grim era of demonization in America begin to end here and now," Biden said.

Police Killing of George Floyd Sparks Outrage, Renews Calls for Racial Justice

Protests were sparked in cities nationwide over the death of George Floyd, who died after a Minneapolis police officer knelt on his neck. In Washington, D.C., many protests were peaceful, but some demonstrators became antagonistic.

Angry protesters took over the streets of downtown D.C. several nights, with some people setting fires, looting, and vandalizing buildings and cars. Protesters reported tear gas or pepper spray being thrown into crowds. Mayor Muriel Bowser instituted a curfew, and hundreds of members of the D.C. National Guard was deployed to support U.S. Park Police, federal police and the Metro Police Department.

Some moments made national headlines:

On the evening of June 1, U.S. Secret Service and U.S. Park Police officers advanced on a crowd of protesters to clear the street in front of Lafayette Square. Federal officers used batons, shields and chemical agents to forcibly push back peaceful protesters before President Donald Trump walked to St. John's Episcopal Church to have his photo taken with a Bible.

Later that week, the District ceremonially renamed a section of 16th Street in front of the White House, painting an unmissable message on the pavement: Black Lives Matter. The street was painted with huge yellow letters spelling out the name of the movement, and Black Lives Matter Plaza has remained a gathering place for those calling for racial justice.

Storm Team4's Doug Kammerer Predicts 4-10 Inches of Snow This Season

Storm Team4 Chief Meteorologist Doug Kammerer is on the lookout for snow. In his official Winter Weather Forecast, he said he expected temperatures to be above average for much of the winter. He predicted a few cold shots, a few really warm shots and 4-10 inches of snow in "just a few small storms." If you're a snow lover, it's perhaps not great news.

The D.C. area did get a mix of snow, sleet and rain on Dec. 16, in the first winter storm of the season. Reagan National Airport got just a coating, while other areas got more. Columbia, Maryland, had 3.5"; Gaithersburg, Maryland had 2" and Sabillasville, Maryland, had more than 12 inches.

1 Killed in St. Mary's as Tropical Storm Isaias Downs Trees, Creates Floods

One person was killed in St. Mary's County, Maryland, in early August as Tropical Storm Isaias thrust damaging wind gusts, several inches of rainfall and life-threatening flash flooding into the D.C. area. A large tree toppled onto a moving car in Mechanicsville, killing the driver.

Leonardtwn in St. Mary's County and Chesapeake Beach in Calvert County were hit by tornadoes, the National Weather Service confirmed.

Isaias dumped nearly 8 inches of rain on Mechanicsville and more than 2 inches on D.C., and then moved past the Chesapeake Bay and skittered up the East Coast.

Trump Supporters, Counterprotesters Clash in Downtown DC

Violent clashes between supporters of President Donald Trump and counterprotesters erupted in the streets of downtown Washington, D.C., on two Saturday nights just four weeks apart.

Both chaotic evenings began following daytime rallies of Trump supporters who were protesting election results they said were fraudulent. There's no evidence of widespread fraud in the 2020 presidential election, experts and officials including Attorney General William Barr have said.

The daytime rallies were largely peaceful, but things turned tense after dark, with sporadic clashes breaking out between Trump supporters and counterprotesters.

One person was stabbed when a fight broke out between two large groups on the night of Nov. 14. On the night of Dec. 12, four people more were stabbed, and Trump supporters and self-identified Proud Boys vandalized at least 4 D.C. churches Saturday night, including burning Black Lives Matter signage, according to officials.

Young Virginia Couple Found Slain on Rural Highway

A young couple was found shot to death in February on a rural Virginia highway, breaking their families' hearts and shocking friends who knew the confessed killer.

According to prosecutors, the couple, Ayanna Maertens-Griffin, 18, and Joel Bianda, 21, had been driving an 18-year-old high school student, Mohamed A. Aly, from Alexandria to Danville to pick up a friend. Aly would later tell police he'd been having thoughts — bad and good — and said he was having doubts about college and his home life. He had taken a 9 mm gun along on the ride.

“I pointed the gun at his head,” Aly would later tell police. “Without thinking, without saying anything, I pulled the trigger.” Then he shot the second victim, according to prosecutors.

In December, Aly pleaded guilty and was sentenced to four consecutive life sentences.

Maryland Residents Could Be Forced to Leave at Moment's Notice as Retaining Wall Fails

Some homeowners in one Maryland neighborhood have been told to prepare to leave their homes as the retaining wall supporting some of their houses has failed, threatening collapse at any moment. The retaining wall built to support houses in the Tantallon community in Fort Washington is shifting every time it rains.

Although Prince George's County officials said the county was not responsible for the wall, it installed new monitoring devices. Days later, the county contacted residents, telling them the wall had failed, and if the monitors detect major movement, they have may have to leave their homes at a moment's notice.

“All of us are veterans, some of us have serious health issues and there's a pandemic going on,” homeowner Sandra McClelland said. “We just don't know where to go.”

Hackers Break Into FCPS Network, Hold Info for Ransom

Hackers broke into Fairfax County Public Schools' computer network and said they were holding personal information for ransom before apparently releasing the names and Social Security numbers of several hundred FCPS employees on the dark web. One of the leaked documents is a spreadsheet from 2014, listing several hundreds of employees' names, Social Security numbers and a few details about their health insurance.

FCPS confirmed it hired cybersecurity experts and said the FBI was investigating the attack.

New Owner of Md. Home Sold at Auction Finds Body of Previous Resident

The new owner of a Maryland home sold at a foreclosure auction found the body of the woman who used to live there inside the house.

Records did not show when the District Heights house was sold, and it was unclear how long ago the 39-year-old woman had died. Her body was found in January.

A neighbor of the woman who grew up across the street said she had special needs. “As we grew up into adults, she never grew up,” he said. “So she needed help with things and didn't process things as well as an adult would, even though she was an adult.”

He said the woman's grandmother took care of her until she died more than a year before.

Police said there was no sign of foul play.

Virginia Woman Dies After Getting Plastic Surgery in Colombia

A 21-year-old Northern Virginia woman died after going to Colombia for plastic surgery.

The family of Adriana Leon said she had lost more than 100 pounds through diet and exercise. As a result, she had excess skin that she wanted removed. She had the procedure in January but then had complications.

“So Adriana had been talking about this for a while and she did her research,” said her mother, Paola Wilkins. “You know, although I was against it, eventually I came to terms that I didn't want to be fighting with my daughter.”

Leon went to Colombia on her own to have the surgery. She died the next day.

Crowds Flock to National Mall for Prayer March: ‘Our Country Is in Trouble’

The National Prayer March, led by Evangelical Rev. Franklin Graham, drew crowds to downtown Washington, D.C., in September.

"These people have come from all over America at their own expense. They're coming to pray for the country," former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee said while hosting the event livestream. "They're here to solve the trouble our land is in."

The prayer event was focused on healing the country amid a pandemic, civil strife and division, not to support any specific party or political issue, according to the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, which put together the march. However, politics were a prominent feature.

Organizers say up to 50,000 people attended, making it one of the largest gatherings D.C. had seen since the coronavirus pandemic shut down normal activities in March.

Best and worst of this week's headlines

The GW Hatchet // Andrew Sugrue

The arrival of the COVID-19 vaccine has placed the end of the pandemic within view, as the first round of shots is administered to health care workers at GW and beyond. Despite the good news, cases and deaths are rising as the country barrels toward a dark pandemic winter.

Here's the best and worst of this week's headlines.

Thumbs Up:

After months of waiting and hoping, the rollout of the Pfizer-NioNTech COVID-19 vaccine is finally underway. Five GW Hospital workers became the first people in D.C. to receive the shot, and the rest of D.C.'s 85,000 health professionals will follow. The District, like virtually every jurisdiction around the country, is planning a phased rollout – health care workers and vulnerable populations will be offered the vaccine before the general public.

Initially, the federal government only allotted about 7,000 doses of the vaccine to the city due to its scarcity at this early stage. But both Maryland and Virginia will each provide the District with 8,000 more shots to help the inoculation effort, citing the fact that three-quarters of D.C. health care workers live in those states.

This is incredible news – full stop. The arrival of the vaccine is the beginning of the end for a pandemic that has taken thousands of lives and destroyed countless livelihoods. As D.C.'s political class likes to say, “our long national nightmare is – almost – over.”

Thumbs Down:

Even though the COVID-19 vaccines are here, the pandemic's death toll is shattering records for cases and deaths. The COVID-19 crisis is the worst it's ever been in the United States – and the District is feeling the pain too. The onset of the frigid D.C. winter and the holiday season have delivered a one-two punch to people's adherence to gathering and distancing guidelines.

As a result, Mayor Muriel Bowser issued an order closing down indoor dining throughout the District until Jan. 15 and extending D.C.'s state of emergency through March.

This move was absolutely necessary, even though it's painful for residents and businesses. It will take months before the vaccine reaches the general public, meaning mask wearing, social distancing and avoiding gatherings remain the best ways to slow the virus's spread.

Students who are coming back to D.C. for this spring need to be especially mindful of the crisis in the District. The temptation will be undoubtedly strong to pile a dozen of your closest friends into a tiny apartment to hang out for the first time in months. But throwing caution to the wind is how you infect yourself, your family and your community. Being smart about COVID-19 does not mean you have to totally cut yourself off socially, but it does mean sticking to the guidelines for just another couple of months. We're almost there.

DC mayor declares Christmas Eve 'Dr. Anthony Fauci Day'

December 24, 2020

Fox News // Sam Dorman

D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser said Wednesday that she was declaring Christmas Eve a day to honor Dr. Anthony Fauci, one of the White House's top coronavirus advisers.

"In honor of Dr. Fauci's 80th birthday tomorrow, I proclaim Thursday, December 24, 2020, 'Dr. Anthony S. Fauci Day,' in Washington, DC," she tweeted, alongside a photo of Fauci and the proclamation.

"We are incredibly proud to count Dr. Fauci among the many DC residents who are sacrificing so much to keep our communities healthy and safe."

The proclamation hails Fauci as someone who "has been a shining light in dark times for the nation, promoting truth over fear and giving Americans hope in the government."

Her comments came as Fauci saw an outpouring of public support, including from Time magazine, which dubbed him "Guardian of the Year" on its front page.

Fauci has been one of the most controversial figures during the pandemic as he's clashed with President Trump on the issue and pushed controversial lockdown measures.

The outpouring of support rubbed some the wrong way. "This is a weird religion," the Daily Caller's Greg Price tweeted.

"In the USA we call Dec 24 'Christmas Eve,'" his colleague, Mary Margaret Olohan, told Bowser.

December 24 is Dr. Fauci Day in DC | Most DC Thing

WUSA 9 // Randolph Terrance Sturdivant

It's time for our Most DC thing which comes to us from the desk of Mayor Muriel Bowser,

In honor and celebration of the 80th birthday he is celebrating today, Mayor Muriel Bowser has issued a proclamation designating Dec 24, 2020 as Dr Anthony Fauci Day

Citing his long-time commitment to public health service as well as his pledge to serve as our incoming President-Elect's chief medical advisor, she called him "a shining light in dark times for the nation"

Why is this a Most DC Thing? Because Dr. Fauci is a part of our D.C. family and when family gets their flowers, we celebrate with them.

Living here for over 40 years, he's D.C. through and through; A die-hard Nats fan who orders takeout to help the neighborhood spots keep their business up. He's got a drink named after him, the Fauci Pouchy, at a local bar. Quiet as kept I heard he likes half-smokes, mumbo sauce, and Junkyard Band.

All of this, and don't let it be forgotten, he personally vaccinated Santa so he can get his work in this evening.

Congratulations Doc, happy birthday, merry Christmas, and thank you for your service.

COVID-19 vaccine arrives at DC Giant stores

FOX 5 // Sierra Fox

Pharmacies are playing a growing role in COVID-19 vaccine distribution.

As of now, five Giant Food stores in DC are taking part in the effort.

Each pharmacy received 600 doses for frontline workers Saturday morning, DC Mayor Muriel Bowser says.

"Giant is thrilled to be one of the first retail locations in Washington, D.C. to help play a critical role in administering the Covid-19 vaccine for essential healthcare workers, (and) doing our part to maximize access to the vaccine quickly and efficiently," Paul Zvaleny, Director of Pharmacy Operations at Giant, said in a statement.

Jana Berhow, vice president for DC Programs, did not hesitate signing up. She said this is about protecting the vulnerable people she works with day to day.

"It's important for keeping them healthy and safe and for me, as a manager, to show my staff too 'I'm not afraid to get this vaccine' I want to get this vaccine. We need to do what we can to keep our people safe," said Berhow.

Two men who work at D.C. Healthcare feel grateful to be among the first to get the vaccine.

They said now they feel safe and secure. Also, they did not experience any reactions during the injection.

"A slight pinch, other than that very normal like any other vaccine," said Jim George.

George's co-worker, Bobble Steven, added that "we are very fortunate. We are very happy – we are the first to get it."

Giant Pharmacy Clinical Programs Manager Samir Balile told FOX 5 that vaccinations will happen daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Balile added it is a step towards that sense of normalcy many are eager for.

"This is a great way to end the year that's been trying for many people and I think it's a great glimmer of hope that at least we're doing our part to ending the pandemic as well as helping our citizens here in the district of Columbia," he said.

At this time, the vaccine is not available for everyone. Giant's priority is the elderly and frontline healthcare workers.

While the general public patiently waits for the vaccine, it is still important to continue wearing a mask, social distancing, and washing hands.

Mayor Bowser announced the District will receive doses of both the Pfizer and Moderna vaccine throughout the week.

8,775 doses of the Pfizer vaccine are from Virginia and 4,875 doses of the Pfizer vaccine are from Operation Warp Speed

8,000 doses of the Moderna vaccine are from Maryland and 12,600 doses of the Moderna vaccine are from Operation Warp Speed.

Coronavirus in DC, Maryland, Virginia: What to Know on Dec. 27

NBC 4 // Staff

Whether and when residents of the D.C. area will see financial relief remained in limbo Sunday as President Donald Trump refused to sign an end-of-year COVID relief and spending bill after it had won sweeping approval in both houses of Congress.

Without the widespread funding provided by the massive measure, a government shutdown will occur when money runs out at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

Washington has been reeling since Trump turned on the deal after the White House had assured Republican leaders that Trump would support it.

Instead, he assailed the bill's plan to provide $600 COVID relief checks to most Americans — insisting it should be $2,000. House Republicans swiftly rejected that idea during a rare Christmas Eve session. But Trump has not been swayed in spite of the nation being in the grip of a pandemic.

President-elect Joe Biden called on Trump to sign the bill immediately as the midnight Saturday deadline neared for two federal programs providing unemployment aid.

With COVID-19 cases surging and a difficult winter expected, state and local officials as well as health care professionals are taking steps to raise awareness about getting help during a time of rising mental health concerns, particularly during the holiday season when the problem can become more acute.

Dr. David Marcozzi, a professor of emergency medicine at the University of Maryland School of Medicine who is a senior medical advisor for COVID-19 to Gov. Larry Hogan, heightened attention on mental health during the pandemic when he spoke about the suicide of a longtime friend during a news conference last month.

“Let's make sure we reach out,” he said, pausing as he spoke with difficulty. “Let's make sure we support each other and talk to a professional if helpful.”

What the Data Shows

D.C reported 492 more cases of the virus in the past two days. Six more residents died, including a 30-year-old man. The D.C. Health Department flagged the city's daily case rate as high and cautioned that more than 12% of total hospital capacity is now devoted to COVID-19 patients.

Maryland reported 1,758 more cases of the virus. Thirty-one more people died. Updated data for Virginia was not immediately available.

Local Coronavirus Headlines

- The high level of coronavirus cases is putting stress on Northern Virginia hospitals — and the health care professionals who work there.

- The stress of the pandemic is a grind. A data analysis from the American Dental Association shows a surge in cases of teeth grinding, clenching and cracking during the COVID-19 crisis. The increases are striking and potentially costly and painful for sufferers.
- All Maryland hospitals are expected to receive some COVID-19 vaccines in the next two weeks to begin vaccinating critical frontline staff, a state health official said Tuesday.
- A professor is using the trust Black Americans have in barbers to make them more comfortable with taking the COVID-19 vaccine.
- A rapid antigen test might seem like a great idea when you're in a hurry and don't have time to wait a few days for results, but those tests are really designed for people with COVID-19 symptoms and in asymptomatic patients can deliver false positive results.
- Help is available for thousands of D.C. residents who have fallen behind on rent payments.
- Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan announced measures to boost the number of available health care workers and plan for more hospital beds.
- COVID-19 numbers continue to paint a dire picture for Black Americans, and there is an ongoing effort in the Black community to increase testing.

Reopening Tracker

- A judge upheld Montgomery County, Maryland's ban on indoor dining.
- D.C. has suspended indoor dining until 5 a.m. on Jan. 15, Mayor Muriel Bowser said in a press release.
- Virginia instituted a curfew and a stricter mask mandate.
- Maryland tightened restrictions on businesses, bars and restaurants.
- All Smithsonian museums and the National Zoo closed because of rising COVID-19 cases, officials announced.
- Hours before some Fairfax County students were set to return to in-person learning, the school district said that they needed to delay the plan.
- Courts throughout Maryland partially shut down due to the pandemic.
- Virginia announced new measures to fight COVID-19 as cases of the virus have spiked across the country.
- Prince George's County tightened restrictions and required masks to be worn outdoors.
- Montgomery County reduced capacity limits at many businesses, including for indoor dining, to 25%.
- D.C.'s mayor extended the city's coronavirus state of emergency to last through the end of the year.

How to Stay Safe

Anyone can get COVID-19. Here are three simple ways the CDC says you can lower your risk:

- Wear a snug-fitting mask that covers your nose and mouth.
- Avoid being indoors with people who are not members of your household. The more people you are in contact with, the more likely you are to be exposed to COVID-19. If you are indoors with people you don't live with, stay at least six feet apart and keep your mask on.

- Wash your hands often, especially after you have been in a public place.

Nine months into the pandemic, a $1,200 relief check only goes so far

The Washington Post // Michael Brice-Saddler

The bank notification popped up three days before Christmas — timing that presented Cynthia Spencer with as many problems as solutions.

It was a $1,000 direct deposit courtesy of D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D), who was spending a chunk of federal Cares Act money on one-time payments to some of the city's unemployed workers.

The first $200 of the $1,200, she soon realized, had gone to federal and local taxes. The next question was harder: What was the smartest way to use the rest of the money?

Spencer, 69, will tell you she was living comfortably before the coronavirus pandemic. The $360 per week she made as a part-time file clerk supplemented her Social Security and disability payments, which went directly to bills for herself and her partner, Melvin Haniber, who is on disability for mental health issues.

That all changed when she was furloughed in March. She wrestled with the city's overwhelmed unemployment system and ended up with $154 a week from the Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA) program since a $600-per-week boost to those benefits expired in July.

This week, with the holidays approaching and PUA set to expire completely by the end of the month, Spencer struggled to balance the need to provide for her family, pay her bills and bolster a completely drained savings account.

The $1,200 relief payments for about 20,000 D.C. residents receiving PUA, announced earlier this month, were supposed to make life easier.

But for Spencer and many others, the one-time check reflects yet another inadequate lifeline thrown to some of the nation's most vulnerable residents. It comes as congressional leaders and the White House remain gridlocked in a debate over the size of the next round of federal stimulus checks.

“When I say I’m struggling, I’m struggling,” Spencer said just before Christmas, explaining that the uncertainty has created tension at times between her and Haniber. “I have 14 grandchildren — you can’t do what you’ve done for your grandchildren for years. I shouldn’t be going through this.”

Spencer woke up a couple of weeks ago with a toothache.

She had just switched to an insurance package that better covered her various medications but left out dental care. She thought a trip to a clinic at a D.C. nonprofit organization would be free but was dismayed to receive a $50 bill. Her follow-up appointment will cost the same — $75 more if the tooth needs to be pulled.

Add those expenses to the ever-growing list.

For Spencer and Haniber, her partner of 26 years, juggling rent, gas, cable, electricity, laundry, food and phone bills has become akin to a high-wire act with no safety net. They use space heaters instead of turning on the heat in their one-bedroom apartment in the Petworth neighborhood in Northwest Washington because the heat would cost them $200 a month.

After they've paid the monthly bills, whatever money is left goes toward the 17 prescriptions Spencer needs to take care of her bad knee, high blood pressure and allergies so severe she also requires a monthly shot. For the first time in her life, Spencer has found herself waiting in line this year at Bread for the City, another local nonprofit organization, to stock up on canned foods. She recently overdrew her checking account after paying her phone bill.

Her grandchildren called about Christmas after the dental visit — they're accustomed to being spoiled by their grandmother, and she's usually happy to oblige. Spencer had hoped to get her four youngest grandchildren — ages 15, 15, 14 and 12 — $50 gift cards and provide coats, scarves and hats for the others.

"I had to work myself down to $40," Spencer said. "But looking at everything, I might have to go down to $30. It's just — I didn't have to do this before. It's hard to say no."

Last Saturday, one of her granddaughters called asking for money to get her nails done. Spencer had always told them, "If Momma can't do it, call Grandma and see if she can."

This year, she can't.

"They don't ask for much; it hurts me to my heart," Spencer added. "I called her back and said: 'You know how times are. Grandma will look out for you when I get back on my feet.'"

Spencer and Haniber, 64, used to occasionally go to IHOP as a treat, but these days, an "outing" means a trip to the doctor or to pick up Spencer's medication. Haniber, a former painter and contractor, spends most of his time watching the news and movies on television — one of the few luxuries they have left. If PUA isn't extended, Spencer said, the cable will be the next to go.

As Spencer contemplated how to use her stimulus check on Tuesday night, President Trump videotaped a message from the White House, a few miles away, that cast doubt on the just-passed next wave of federal relief. He said he wanted Congress to boost federal stimulus payments from $600 to $2,000. On Wednesday, as the couple watched the local news, a chyron flashed across the screen: "TRUMP MIGHT NOT SIGN SPENDING BILL."

Ten bucks left, no place to go: How the pandemic and a broken unemployment system are upending people's lives

“It’s a game with them,” Haniber said. “The Democrats were asking for $1,200 and Republicans said, ‘No, that’s too much.’ Then they offered $600.”

“Now [Trump’s] talking about $2,000?” Spencer replied, dreading the idea that aid could be delayed because of the debate. “That is like a slap in the face because I had planned on at least getting my credit card bills down halfway.”

She had also hoped that the federal stimulus money would miraculously arrive this week, enabling her to spend some of it on her grandchildren.

“My head is just above water,” she said. “If this thing don’t pass, I don’t know what next month will be.”

Frustration and uncertainty

Pandemic Unemployment Assistance is determined by measuring half of a state or territory’s average unemployment benefit, which in the District’s case is about $179. Spencer says the city’s Department of Employment Services (DOES) did not notify her that PUA was an option when it denied her standard unemployment in March. She learned about the program after speaking with an advocate at D.C. Legal Aid and has since spread the word to her friends and neighbors who were also ineligible for regular unemployment.

“When you get that slip in the mail saying you’re ineligible for benefits, nothing on there says you can apply for [PUA],” Spencer said. “You have to figure it out on your own or talk to somebody who knows.”

Her experience isn’t unique. More than 160,000 Washington residents have filed unemployment claims this year, and in recent months, dozens have testified at D.C. Council hearings about their woes dealing with the employment office.

Professional juggler Christian Kloc told the council he had to rely on friends and Internet forums to learn about the unemployment process because the department lacked comprehensive information on its website. For example, he didn’t know he needed to fill out a weekly unemployment certification form to continue receiving PUA benefits.

“There should be no guesswork or uncertainty in this process,” Kloc said. “If the government had made requirements crystal clear for independent contractors like me, we would’ve jumped through every hoop you asked us to.”

At a later hearing, DOES Director Unique Morris-Hughes acknowledged that some of the requirements for federal programs are not intuitive, especially for people who have worked in multiple states.

“DOES didn’t create this, we are just trying to play by the rules of the game,” Morris-Hughes said.

Council member Elissa Silverman (I-At Large) said in an interview that she has fielded scores of complaints from people trying to navigate the system. She called the $1,200 supplemental payments to PUA recipients a good decision. But she also said DOES needs to better help residents understand how to get and keep benefits.

PUA recipients, for example, should be able to get back pay or increase their benefits beyond $179 per week.

But many — including Spencer — are either unaware of those options or say they have not received the back payments.

A fresh start

Haniber stood outside the couple's apartment and smoked a cigarette Wednesday, taking in the yard he has tried to fix up over the years. Their landlord had yet to reimburse him for grass Haniber planted.

Already, the $1,000 from the city was accounted for: $296 for credit card payments, $60 for food and $253 toward gifts for Spencer's grandchildren, including new masks and hand sanitizer. That left about $400 to start replenishing Spencer's depleted savings account, but she's unsure how long the money will stay there.

The couple desperately wants to move, and they were taking the steps to do so earlier this year. They completed an 18-month class for first-time home buyers with the Greater Washington Urban League and were preapproved for a loan just before the coronavirus pandemic. They were eyeing a sunny affordable dwelling unit in the Marshall Heights neighborhood in Southeast Washington, fitted with a garage, space for plants and enough bedrooms for two of Spencer's daughters to move in.

Now, Spencer said, "We have to start all over again."

They hope to relaunch the process next year, assuming she is able to return to work, as her employer has promised.

Spencer would need to prove she has a job, pays her rent and has at least $1,000 in her bank account. All attainable goals, she says. But because of the amount of time that has elapsed since the first preapproval, she said, she'll also need to supply two months of clean bank statements. That may take some time.

"Our bank statements were so good before the pandemic," she said with a laugh. "You don't want to see our bank statements now."

Can tailored messages to bad drivers prevent crashes? D.C. is about to find out.

The Washington Post // Luz Lazo

Bad drivers in the District could soon get a serious warning sent straight to their cellphones.

The city is working to identify drivers with a history of traffic violations, such as speeding and red-light camera tickets, to send messages alerting them of their history of infractions while warning of their risks of getting into a fatal crash.

City officials say they hope the pointed messages will deter dangerous road behaviors.

“We know that there is a subset of drivers that are putting others at serious risk with excessive speeding and red-light running,” said Jeff Marootian, director of the city’s Department of Transportation, one of the agencies leading the effort. “We’re hoping that this creative approach can ultimately reduce serious injury and fatality crashes.”

A team of city data experts is analyzing traffic citation data to identify drivers at a high risk of involvement in a serious crash. The “tailored messages,” they say, will be sent to a sample of those drivers next year. At the end of the 18-month pilot, officials say, they expect to know the answer to a key question: Can targeting messages to high-risk drivers prevent crashes?

“This is a creative approach that we haven’t tried before, and we think that it is worth the effort,” Marootian said.

The concept, which D.C. officials say is a first among cities nationwide, is the latest effort to target dangerous drivers in a city where serious and fatal crashes are on the rise. City leaders said evidence shows drivers with multiple traffic violations are more likely to be involved in crashes.

Researchers have studied the relationship between repeat traffic offenders and serious collisions, with some data suggesting a strong correlation between the two. But some researchers also have pointed to other factors at play, such as the amount of time the driver spends on the road and exposure to traffic enforcement systems.

In D.C., speed and red-light cameras are widely deployed across major commuter corridors, generating $195 million in ticket fines last year, the bulk of it from the camera program, according to AAA analysis.

City officials say they hope data from the program can help them track drivers who aren’t deterred by the fines.

A team from The Lab @ DC, a project-driven agency within the office of Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D), is examining data from the District’s automated traffic enforcement program to predict a driver’s likelihood of being involved in a serious crash.

Working with DDOT, D.C. police and the Department of Motor Vehicles, The Lab team will create a campaign that could include text messages and mail sent to a sample of high-risk drivers.

“We will evaluate whether drivers who receive these messages have fewer red-light violations, speeding violations, and ultimately, crashes, compared to the group of high-risk drivers who do not receive the messages,” according to The Lab.

The Lab will analyze data that includes paid and unpaid citations for speeding and red-light cameras, and also could include vehicle registration data in its analysis, according to the agency. Officials said they hope the experiment could lead to policies and educational programs around traffic safety.

The program is among the latest road-safety measures with the purpose of cutting the growing number of traffic injuries and fatalities in the nation’s capital. The increase comes despite Bowser’s Vision Zero traffic safety plan to eliminate traffic deaths by 2024.

An increase in bicyclist and pedestrian deaths has hindered progress for Bowser’s program. As of Dec. 23, police records show 36 people have been killed in traffic crashes in the city compared to 26 at the same time last year, an increase of nearly 40 percent.

More than 4,000 crashes this year have resulted in injuries, according to city data.

As part of traffic safety measures, the city lowered the default speed limit this summer on city streets to 20 mph from 25 mph and implemented a “slow streets” initiative in which some neighborhood streets are restricted to local traffic with a speed limit of 15 mph.

In September, the D.C. Council approved legislation accelerating improvements to bike and pedestrian infrastructure, expanding the city’s automated traffic enforcement program and promising more traffic safety education. Through the legislation, the city would focus more resources on high-risk intersections and areas with less access to transit.

City officials have been increasingly concerned about the growing number of traffic fatalities, supporting more aggressive approaches to target dangerous drivers with higher penalties.

Although the new messages appear as a warning to higher-risk drivers, city officials said the intent is to educate the recipient. Marootian said there is no violation or fine attached to the message and that the campaign is to use data to directly communicate with individual drivers.

Some questioned whether the message will work.

Matthew Sampson, a traffic safety advocate and D.C. resident, said there is “messaging all over to drivers to drive slow, but they still continue to drive dangerously.” He said the problem is many drivers, including those licensed in Maryland and Virginia, face no consequence for racking up traffic citations in the city.

“If a bad driver has a disdainful attitude toward traffic violations in D.C. anyway, what makes us think messaging from D.C. would work?” he said. “It seems to me that there’s bigger regulatory fruit to aim for. That said, it is nice that DDOT is trying.”

D.C. Council backs proposal to let e-scooter riders recoup medical bills after crashes.

New DC program aims to curb traffic deaths

December 26, 2020

WTOP // Andrea Cambron

A new pilot program by D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser will send messages to drivers who are at risk of getting into a serious crash throughout the District.

The program is a part of the Mayor's Vision Zero initiative that aims to eliminate traffic-related deaths. The two-year study will evaluate whether targeted messages to drivers who have a history of fast driving, helps decrease red-light and speeding violations.

A 2015 report from the Journal of Traffic and Engineering found that drivers with multiple traffic violations are more likely to be involved in crashes.

Overall, the goal is to see if the messages aid in helping to eliminate the amount of traffic deaths.

The complicated racial history of the high school D.C. is renaming

The Washington Post // Stefan Fatsis

In the fall of 1954, four months after the Supreme Court outlawed segregation in D.C. public schools in a companion case to Brown v. Board of Education, six of the city's seven all-White high schools accepted Black students for the first time, from a handful to hundreds. The seventh was Woodrow Wilson High School.

Wilson had been named by Look magazine as one of the 10 best high schools in America a few years earlier. Its student body boasted the children of diplomats and congressmen; graduates included future senator John Warner, future anchorman Roger Mudd, future billionaire Warren Buffett and future AIDS activist Larry Kramer. But as the rest of Washington began grappling with desegregation — hundreds of White students at other high schools staged a three-day walkout that October — Wilson's 1,143 students, 62 faculty members and staff remained entirely White.

Today, Wilson is D.C.'s most diverse public high school: 39 percent White, 29 percent Black and 22 percent Latino. It has long considered itself progressive. In the 1960s, Wilson students protested the war in Vietnam. In the 1980s, Black Power organizer Kwame Ture, formerly Stokely Carmichael, visited an English class. In 2014, students outnumbered and out-chanted antigay hatemongers from Westboro Baptist Church who picketed after the school's then-principal came out as gay. Wilson has a diversity task force, gender-neutral bathroom signs, and clubs with names like Common Ground and Gender Sexuality Alliance.

But since before its doors opened in 1935 — to White students only — Wilson has been defined by race. It was built across the street from a Black neighborhood, Reno City, that was at the time being slowly demolished by the federal government. And it was named for a president who wrote sympathetically of the Confederacy and Ku Klux Klan, resegregated federal agencies and screened "The Birth of a Nation" at the White House. Wilson's beliefs weren't unknown inside the building. In 1972, an African American sociology teacher, Edward Cannon, told the student newspaper that the school was named after "a bigot." Wilson was "founded in racism," Cannon said, "and the odor still exists."

Amid the nationwide protests for social justice, cities and states have been reckoning with the names of public institutions. Who should be defrocked and why? How should they be replaced? In D.C., a committee reporting to Mayor Muriel E. Bowser this summer proposed renaming dozens of schools, parks, playgrounds and buildings. Top of the list was Wilson, where changing the school's name already had spurred a coalition, a public forum, a petition and protest rallies. A nonbinding online survey of replacement candidates ended this month, and Bowser and D.C. Public Schools Chancellor Lewis D. Ferebee are expected to announce a new name, which would need approval from the D.C. Council, in coming days.

Six of the seven finalists are Black educators, politicians or literary figures. The other is purely geographic: Northwest. Four-term D.C. Mayor Marion Barry Jr. was a polarizing figure in life, and he just had a city government building named for him. Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright

August Wilson would appease alumni attached to the surname but has no personal connection to D.C. A Wilson parent who was involved in the name-change effort, Zerline Hughes Spruill, who is Black, said Bowser “put ‘Black Lives Matter’ on the street in front of the White House. I’d like to think she wouldn’t put ‘Wilson’ back on the name of the school.”

Any change will be a historical corrective. “Everything Wilson did was to undercut the very people whose descendants now go to the school,” said Chris Myers Asch, the co-author of “Chocolate City: A History of Race and Democracy in the Nation’s Capital” and a 1990 Wilson graduate. But only one namesake would fully confront the century of racial ignominy that has helped define the school: a teacher named Edna Burke Jackson.

After the Supreme Court ruling in 1954, the demographics of working- and middle-class Washington shifted. White families packed up for Maryland and Virginia, and D.C.’s population flipped — from 65 percent White in 1950 to majority-Black in 1960. Though the wealthier neighborhoods that fed into Wilson didn’t change, the school system sought to look as if it was proactively desegregating the school. On Sept. 12, 1955, Wilson enrolled its first Black students, one boy and one girl, both in the 10th grade. “Wilson High Integrated,” the Washington Evening Star reported. The school also was assigned two Black faculty, chemistry teacher Archie Lucas and Jackson, who taught European and world history.

Jackson graduated in 1928 from Dunbar, the legendary Black D.C. public high school, where she was a stalwart of the debate team, editor in chief of the newspaper and a member of the French and Latin clubs. She won a scholarship to Howard University, studied French and history and earned a master’s in education. Today, she might have become a lawyer or a diplomat. Then, she did what many highly educated Black women did: She taught. After six years at a Black high school in Tulsa, Jackson returned home in 1940 to work at D.C.’s Cardozo High School, which was also all Black. Fifteen years later, she was sent to Wilson, where she would stay until retiring in 1976.

Her first years there couldn’t have been easy. In his memoir “Ghost Light,” the writer Frank Rich, Wilson Class of 1967, recalled a history teacher who asked students to petition Congress to change the national anthem to “Dixie.” Former students and a family member told me that White teachers wouldn’t sit with Jackson at lunch and used the n-word in her presence. “It’s certainly not the era where you would stand up and create some sort of huge thing about it,” Sue E. Houchins, an African American studies professor at Bates College who was a close family friend of Jackson’s, told me. “You moved yourself through it with dignity, and that is who she was.”

Washington was a government town but a Southern city. Homes around Wilson were built with restrictive racial covenants attached to their deeds. “Make no mistake, the class was full of children of racists,” one alumna commented in the name-change survey. “[Jackson’s] even temper and intelligence in the face of these students have been a lesson for life.”

Former students said Jackson, who died in 2004, was kind, even-tempered and serious, and held her students to high standards. “She was all about education,” her niece, Paula B. Duckett, told me. In the late 1950s, after a lesson on Communism and the Cold War, Jackson arranged for her class to visit the Soviet Embassy. “She insisted that in order to defend democracy, Americans must know freedom’s enemies,” a student from the early ’60s wrote in the survey. Leland Barrows, a retired professor who graduated from Wilson in 1960, told me he became a historian in part because of Jackson: “She viewed the study of history as a search for truth.”

In D.C.’s first public outreach about a new Wilson name, I nominated Reno City, to amplify the historical truth of what was destroyed across from where the school now stands. That name didn’t make the cut, and when the final round began, I voted for Vincent E. Reed, Wilson’s first Black principal, who was dispatched to the school in 1967 to help manage any fallout from a second federal lawsuit that forced the comprehensive desegregation Wilson had averted a decade earlier.

Reed spent just two years at Wilson — though what years they were. The Black student population increased tenfold, to more than 300. Vietnam, drugs, the King assassination. “Vince was navigating all of that, everything,” said Jack Koczela, Class of 1970. Reed ran the school with equanimity, formidability and decency. He studied the yearbook to learn students’ names. Reed went on to an acclaimed, five-year run as superintendent and ended his career as an executive at The Washington Post. Post columnists Colbert I. King and Courtland Milloy and former Post publisher Don Graham have backed Reed’s name for the school. “He is a hero with a capital H,” Graham told me.

But last month, I listened in as the editors of the Wilson student newspaper, the Beacon, deliberated over Zoom which name to endorse. (I’m an informal adviser to the paper.) One student mentioned Barry’s criminal record. No one liked the idea of August Wilson. The editors rejected Northwest, the overwhelmingly White city quadrant where the school is located, because it reflects “gentrification and racism,” one said, and the student body comes from across D.C. They liked Jackson and Reed because of their personal connections to the school, but Jackson, the editors decided, offered more.

As a Black woman who integrated the school, the students wrote in an editorial, Jackson is the antithesis of Woodrow Wilson, a White man who segregated the government. They pointed out that, no small thing, Jackson would be the first woman on the marquee of a D.C. high school. And, they wrote, she would represent something beyond her race or gender: a message that “teachers matter just as much, if not more, than any president or famous figure.”

Reading that, and contemplating the story of Jackson’s life and what she endured and accomplished, I went back online and changed my vote. (Of the more than 6,000 responses, Reed and Jackson split the Wilson educator support, combining for 36 percent. August Wilson drew 29 percent and Northwest 15 percent, with the remaining candidates in single digits.) “It’s not that Edna was first — that’s important — it’s that Edna was an instrument of change, both for white students and for the few black students who had to negotiate their way through that place,” said Houchins, the Bates professor. “That’s reason enough.”

At the end of 1958, Jackson posed before a classroom of White students for a photographer from The Post. She wore a smart jacket and pearls, her signature cat-eye glasses and a gentle smile. “Mrs. Edna B. Jackson, Negro history teacher, is a favorite of Wilson High School students,” the caption read. In the accompanying article, schools superintendent Carl F. Hansen pronounced the desegregation of D.C.’s schools “complete as of today” and “a miracle of social adjustment.” Jackson wasn’t quoted. Not a single Black student graduated from Wilson that academic year.

The name above the entrance to this school or any building can only do so much. The composition of Wilson’s AP classes, clubs, lunch tables and sports teams reflects enduring educational shortcomings and racial divides. The discovery of swastikas in school bathrooms last year and a report in the principal’s weekly newsletter this fall that students used racial slurs while Zoom-bombing classes reveal deeper societal problems.

But if we’re going to name buildings after people, we should recognize people whose legacies are tangible, whose biographies are more relatable than a Wikipedia entry. I can see teachers using Jackson’s life and the ghosts in the building to explore the history of desegregation. And I can hear the student section at basketball games chanting, “Ed-NUH! Ed-NUH! Ed-NUH!”

Museum of the Bible considers suing D.C. mayor over virus shutdown, citing religious freedom claims

The Washington Post // Sarah Pulliam Bailey and Peggy McGlone

Officials at the Museum of the Bible said Wednesday they are considering suing D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) over the city's latest round of coronavirus restrictions, saying they prevent the museum's employees from exercising their religious freedom and its visitors from possibly having a religious experience.

The plan to pursue legal action comes after an order by Bowser on Dec. 18 said museums and indoor dining in the District must close from Dec. 23 to Jan. 15, 2021, which includes the season of Advent and Christmas, a normally busy time for the museum. In a letter to Bowser, museum officials argue that the city is violating the Religious Freedom Restoration Act by not allowing the museum to exercise religion.

The museum closed Wednesday to comply with the mayor's orders while officials explored legal options. They are asking that Bowser's previous restrictions be reinstated, where 250 socially distanced people could be on one floor at a time. The museum has nearly 400,000 square feet of space spread over seven floors.

A spokesman for Bowser did not respond to a request for comment early Wednesday.

"It's our desire to be treated the same. We don't want to create a havoc," said museum president Harry Hargrave. "We want to stand up for our rights as well, and we feel like they've been violated."

He said the museum changed its bylaws about a year ago to make it more explicit that it is a religious organization. While museum officials don't intend to proselytize, he said, it "communicates the virtues of the Bible and what it means."

The museum's mission statement has shifted several times over the years. Before 2012, it had references to the Bible's authority and reliability but removed them in 2013 to say: "We exist to invite all people to engage with the Bible[.] We invite Biblical exploration through museum exhibits and scholarly pursuits."

Now its mission states, "Museum of the Bible is an innovative, global, educational institution whose purpose is to invite all people to engage with the transformative power of the Bible." Its board and executive team must sign a statement of faith.

The museum's original funding came primarily from the evangelical Green family, owners of the Hobby Lobby chain of craft stores. The $500 million museum opened Nov. 17, 2017, with exhibitions tracing the cultural impact of the Bible. In its letter to the mayor, it cites the Greens' famous 2014 Hobby Lobby case regarding contraception that went to the Supreme Court as an important case involving the Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

Officials with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have urged Americans to stay home over the holiday season to prevent the spread of the coronavirus. Museum officials said it would abide by the law, but the city's regulations aren't urging people to stay home, said Jeremy Tedesco, an attorney for Alliance Defending Freedom working on behalf of the museum. Tedesco said that Bowser's new restrictions are undermined because the city still allows people to frequent places such as grocery stores, big-box stores, financial institutions, auto repair shops and transportation services.

"A pandemic doesn't cancel or put a pause on fundamental First Amendment freedoms," Tedesco said. "They have to apply these orders in a way that's consistent and protecting fundamental rights."

The American Alliance of Museums is not aware of any legal actions taken by museums against government restrictions across the country.

Hargrave said that being shut down from March until June was "a crippling experience" that resulted in 40 employees being furloughed.

The museum's most recent tax returns, for the year that ended June 30, 2019, showed revenues of $140.5 million, including $128 million in donations, and expenses of $78.8 million. One of the largest non-federal museums, it ended the year with a $61.7 million surplus, the tax documents show.

The museum's letter to the mayor says the new restrictions violate the First Amendment and the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, citing a Supreme Court ruling from November that said the state of New York violated the rights of some houses of worship by imposing mandatory attendance caps.

The lawsuit comes on the heels of a city settlement with the archdiocese of Washington, which sued the District over new restrictions last month as coronavirus numbers climbed.

The city was also sued this fall by Capitol Hill Baptist Church, a Southern Baptist megachurch that wanted the right to meet outside in the District, with masks and social distancing. A judge in October granted the church's request.

No cases of coronavirus infection have been traced to the museum, Hargrave said.

As December has brought some of the largest numbers of infections since the start of the pandemic, many major museums in New York City have remained open, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art. But most museums in the Washington area have already chosen to close.

The National Gallery of Art and the Smithsonian in November closed the museums they had reopened, due to the rising number of cases in the region.

The Phillips Collection, which reopened with limited hours Oct. 15, has closed as a result of the mayor's restrictions. It will remain shuttered until February, when it plans to reopen with an exhibition celebrating its 100th anniversary.

The International Spy Museum will close at the end of Wednesday for three weeks because of the mayor's orders. The museum had adapted its experience by creating linear paths through its exhibitions, providing styluses to use on its touch screens and increasing its cleaning procedures. But it will follow the city's guidelines.

"We are watching everything the mayor says," International Spy Museum spokeswoman Aliza Bran said. "Safety is a top priority for our staff, visitors and volunteers. We are happy to comply with what is going to be best for the community. We want to keep the community safe."

Like other institutions, the museum has moved most of its programs online, broadening its audience and its donor pool.

Planet Word, the city's newest museum, closed its facility in the restored Franklin School on K Street NW on Nov. 23, a month after its Oct. 22 grand opening.

"Our overriding consideration continues to be the safety of our community," Planet Word founder Ann Friedman said. "We don't yet have an opening date to announce, and a decision about when to reopen will be based on guidance from government and public health officials." The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum reopened Oct. 26 and closed again Nov. 23. During that month, it limited visitors to 250 a day.

"The health and safety of our visitors, staff, and volunteers are the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's highest priority," it stated. "The spread of the coronavirus is projected to continue to increase in the coming weeks, both locally and nationally."

The Museum of the Bible implemented "covid commandments" when it reopened in June, including more cleaning procedures. People above the age of 3 are required to wear face coverings and practice social distancing. Employees use masks and disposable gloves, and all staff and visitors have their temperature checked.

The museum says it uses staggered entry for social distancing and contact tracing to track any possible virus cases. It has closed its restaurant and interactive exhibits, including some children's exhibits, though its cafe has been open.

You don't have to be in a church to pray or feel spiritually nourished

The Washington Post // Colbert I. King

Readers of this column know that I'm not one to start trouble. The last thing I want, especially during this Christmas season, is to get crosswise with Cardinal Wilton Gregory, archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Washington, about an issue over which he might rightfully claim superiority — i.e., praying.

Gregory sued D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) and the city over restrictions imposed upon indoor gatherings, including at houses of worship, because of the coronavirus pandemic. He asserted that praying apart does not provide the same spiritual nourishment as praying together and that the city's restrictions infringe upon the free exercise of religion.

The lawsuit has been settled. Limits on indoor worship have been modified. Now the terms are set at 250 people or 25 percent of seating capacity, whichever is smaller.

I, an acknowledged sinner who falls short of the glory of God, still must weigh in on the issue of praying apart vs. praying alone.

Now, I get the part about Gregory's saying a 50-person cap on religious services could be viewed as discriminatory because the order allowed big-box stores, retailers, liquor stores and other "essential" venues to operate without similar limits. Religious worship, Gregory contends, should be treated the same way.

Indeed, this pandemic has found me in big-box stores, and also liquor stores (well, just two), where I have shared space with more than 50 people. Of course, we were wearing masks and doing our best to keep six feet apart. So, I understand why the archbishop would want to know why his congregants should be turned away if they are willing to take similar precautions in their churches.

I also understand why the District has tried to impose science-based measures to protect the personal safety of residents and visitors. Covid-19 is hammering this city.

The District's reported data as of Thursday included 210 new positive coronavirus cases, bringing the District's overall positive case total to 27,436. Tragically, 756 District residents have lost their lives due to covid-19, including five on Wednesday.

Epidemiological data show that gatherings are significant contributors to the transmission of the coronavirus.

The mayor has a duty to act. Multiple caps and restrictions are being imposed, but not exclusively on houses of worship. Restaurants, live entertainment, sporting events, mass gatherings with distinctions drawn between indoor and outdoor gatherings also face restrictions, no matter the size of the venue.

To contend that spiritual nourishment is received only if you assemble in church, sit in pews and collectively engage in the liturgy, that is a bridge too far for some faith traditions.

Churches in the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, as well as other religious denominations, are doing their part to help contain the spread of covid-19 by suspending in-house services. Many, like my own, have switched to virtual services where Mass and Communion are still observed.

I come away feeling spiritually nourished. It may not show. But I do.

Of course, there is a difference between engaging in the flesh vs. connecting through a broadcast medium. I miss gathering with others — sometimes.

But the essential connection is the 2-5 with the Almighty, not the person sitting in the next pew. That conduit is available in church, at home, at any time, anywhere.

I hasten to note that Cardinal Gregory is not a cleric parochially focused only on Catholic matters. I know he shares Bowser's concern for the health and safety of all our communities.

As I observed in an earlier column, Gregory does not hesitate to raise his voice against injustices of any kind. He was one of the first religious leaders to show moral leadership by denouncing President Trump's use of riot control tactics and debasement of the Bible during his June 1 photo op stunt outside St. John's Church at Lafayette Square during demonstrations after the killing of George Floyd.

When Trump tried the same caper the following day with a visit to the St. John Paul II National Shrine, Gregory let him have it. Blasting Trump's attempt to associate with Pope John Paul II's work, Gregory said "[the pontiff] certainly would not condone the use of tear gas and other deterrents to silence, scatter or intimidate them for a photo opportunity in front of a place of worship and peace."

Perhaps Trump should have prayed instead.

I read in Matthew 6:5, "And when you pray, do not be like the hypocrites, for they love to pray standing . . . on the street corners to be seen by men. But when you pray, go into your room, close the door and pray to your Father, who is unseen."

With that in mind, perhaps praying apart is the same as praying together.

Besides, I'm not aware that God conducts head counts.

But, again, I'm not one to start trouble.

In first Christmas mass as Cardinal, Gregory addresses hundreds of worshipers

WJLA 7 // Tom Roussey

In his first Christmas day mass since being elevated to Cardinal, Wilton Gregory made a point of not dwelling too much on the coronavirus pandemic.

“We’ve spent nine months talking about it. It’s not something that’s new to the people,” Gregory later told ABC. “I didn’t want to dwell on all that we didn’t have. I wanted to highlight that which we have and that which we enjoy.”

In his homily at the noon Christmas mass, Cardinal Gregory talked about the differences between the 2020 census and the census described in the Bible for which Joseph and Mary had to travel to Bethlehem.

He said even though census data today is much more scientific than back then, “the birth of Mary’s son has influenced human history in ways that even our sophisticated computers will never be able to measure.”

Gregory’s only reference to the pandemic came when he talked about how people no longer have to travel to take part in a census.

“Imagine the cost, the effort, and the inconvenience of returning to our hometowns and communities, especially in the face of our current travel restrictions because of the pandemic,” he said.

Late last month, Pope Francis elevated Gregory to the rank of cardinal at a ceremony in Rome. Gregory is the first Black cardinal ever from the United States.

Friday marked Gregory’s second Christmas since coming to Washington as archbishop in the spring of 2019.

At the noon mass last Christmas, Gregory presided before thousands of people at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Northeast Washington. This year, he looked out on just a couple hundred socially distanced worshipers who didn’t even come close to filling the largest Catholic church in North America.

But the number could have been even smaller – D.C. mayor Muriel Bowser had limited religious gatherings to 50 people until backing down after the Archdiocese of Washington sued the city in order to be allowed to have more people.

Bowser relaxed her rules in the face of the lawsuit, agreeing to allow churches to have either 250 people or 25 percent capacity, whichever is smaller. D.C.'s attorney general announced a settlement of the lawsuit this week with those same numbers.

"I was very grateful to the mayor," Gregory told ABC7. "I think she's first of all very concerned about the safety of our people, but she's also willing to acknowledge that we can gather safely in a large place like this and in our parishes with a larger number."

As they do every year, employees and volunteers at the National Shrine organized a free Christmas dinner.

Valencia Camp, the director of special events at the National Shrine, says about 1,500 meals went to those who were homebound, and around 400 meals were available for people to grab as they left the church to take home.

Normally, the church hosts a big in person dinner during and after the noon mass on its lower level rather than offering take home meals outside.

But although they couldn't do the sit down meal this year, Camp says like Cardinal Gregory they chose to focus on what they still had, not what they didn't.

"The warmth, the love, the care ...it's still here. It did not change," she said.

D.C.'s largest church downsizes, socially distances Christmas Eve mass

WJLA 7 // Tom Roussey

Normally-packed Christmas masses at D.C.'s largest church are anything but this year, as only 250 people at a time are being allowed in. But even that number would have been far lower if not for the settlement of a lawsuit brought against the city by the Archdiocese of Washington.

A spokesperson for the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception says last year around 15,000 people attended over the course of seven masses on Christmas Eve and Christmas day.

This year the National Shrine already knows how many will attend six masses – just 1200 people.

Thanks to the archdiocese's lawsuit, current DC regulations allow up to 250 people at a time in houses of worship. That number includes staff, so the National Shrine only gave away 200 reserved tickets per mass for attendees.

The limit set by DC mayor Muriel Bowser had been 50 people regardless of a church's size, but in its lawsuit the archdiocese argued that wasn't reasonable for big churches like the National Shrine, which is the largest Catholic church in North America.

The mayor backed down from the 50 number, and in a settlement this week DC attorney general Karl Racine announced a settlement in which churches can have 250 people or 25% of their capacity, whichever is lower.

The National Shrine says it is following strict protocols for those who get tickets. ABC7 witnessed attendees to the 2:00 p.m. mass on Christmas Eve getting their temperatures checked and being given hand sanitizer.

Seating is socially distanced and worshipers are asked to leave out a side door immediately after the mass ends. Information for potential contact tracing is also taken.

All tickets for the six masses have been given out. For those who can't come or were uncomfortable coming the National Shrine is livestreaming its Christmas Eve mass starting at 10:00 p.m. Christmas Eve, as well as livestreaming the noon mass Friday and a 2:30 p.m. Spanish language mass on its website.

For D.C. protests, Proud Boys settle in at city's oldest hotel and its bar

The Washington Post // Joe Heim Marissa J. Lang

Located just five blocks from the White House, the Hotel Harrington is the city's oldest continuously operating hotel and has a long-standing reputation as one of the most affordable in the heart of the District. But over the past few months, the Harrington has been gaining a new reputation: Proud Boys hangout.

The militant right-wing organization that vigorously supports President Trump, which has clashed in violent street battles with members of antifascist groups and others who oppose Trump, has made the Harrington its unofficial headquarters when members come to the District. Several hundred Proud Boys recently stayed at the hotel while in town for the Dec. 12 protest of Joe Biden's election as president.

More protests by pro-Trump groups are planned in downtown D.C. on Jan. 6.

Wearing their signature black and gold colors, large numbers of the group spent much of the afternoon of Dec. 12 drinking openly and chanting on the street in front of the hotel at 11th and E streets NW. They ranged in age from late teenagers to 50- and 60-year-olds, though most appeared to be in their 30s and 40s. Others filled the outdoor patio at Harry's, the hotel bar, where they had gathered on previous protest weekends and on the Fourth of July. Harry's closed midafternoon, but the patio and street in front of it remained crowded throughout the night.

The repeated and growing presence of Proud Boys at the bar and hotel has unnerved some guests and workers, many of whom are Black and Hispanic and were intimidated by their presence, according to two employees who spoke on the condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly.

In the past three months, Harry's has been cited three times for violating social distancing and mask regulations. The violations occurred on weekends when large numbers of Proud Boys and other pro-Trump supporters, in town for demonstrations, were in the bar.

For the hotel and the bar, there seems to be uncertainty about what steps they can or should take. Ann Terry, the general manager of the hotel, declined to comment. During a brief phone call, John Boyle, the owner of Harry's, declined to comment other than to say that the bar closed early on Dec. 11 and 12 because of concerns over not being able to maintain coronavirus social distancing guidelines. The bar's website announced it will be closed on Jan. 5 and 6.

Enrique Tarrío, the leader of the Proud Boys, said in an interview, that in the past, the group's members have stayed at the Harrington and frequented Harry's because they're accessible to downtown D.C. and close to the Trump hotel and the White House.

He said that the corner in front of the hotel and bar has remained a gathering point for the Proud Boys, but that the group had outgrown Harry's because it wasn't big enough to accommodate all of its members who attended the most recent protest, which he said numbered about 1,000.

Tarrio said the group's members would not stay at the hotel or go to the bar if the businesses asked them to stay away.

"Of course not. I wouldn't want to go somewhere, a private business where I'm unwelcome," he said. "There's many other options."

Tarrio said he wasn't aware of reported incidents of Proud Boys refusing to wear masks inside the bar or hotel but said "for the most part, we're not big on masks."

Since opening in 1914, the 250-room Harrington has billed itself as an affordable tourist hotel, hosting tens of thousands of visitors to the District over the past 106 years. It was also a family business. Charles McCutcheon, the owner of the hotel until he died earlier this year, was the grandson of its co-founder. Many employees of the hotel have been there for generations.

For some of them, a longtime employee said, there is a fear that the hotel's reputation is being tarnished by the Proud Boys' repeated presence at the hotel and bar.

"It's sad that they feel so comfortable here because obviously nobody who works here supports this stuff," the employee said.

As dark approached on the night of Dec. 12, members of the Proud Boys donned Kevlar helmets, bulletproof vests, protective forearm coverings and large rucksacks. Many carried long poles, long-handled black flashlights and collapsible batons. Some carried cases of beer. They departed the hotel in packs and began marching through the District's downtown chanting "Whose streets? Our streets!" and "F--- antifa!"

The group made repeated efforts to approach Black Lives Matter Plaza near the White House, where they hoped to encounter a smaller number of antifascists and others who had gathered to voice their opposition to Trump and keep his supporters from removing signs or artwork critical of the president and memorializing Black people killed by law enforcement.

D.C. police spent much of the night trying to keep the groups apart and at one point established a police line along 15th Street NW. Unable to break through the barrier, a group of Proud Boys doubled back to the hotel holding a Black Lives Matter banner from a nearby church. They carried it in front of the Harrington and lit it on fire as members circled the flames yelling and hooting.

City officials later said four churches in downtown D.C. had Black Lives Matters signs removed and damaged. Tarrio told The Washington Post he was among those responsible for tearing down and burning the signs.

For the most part, police were successful in keeping the groups apart, but there were skirmishes. At least four people were stabbed during a melee near Harry's. Police have declined to comment on the political affiliations of those involved.

In the days after the protest, District leaders expressed concerns about the Proud Boys' presence.

"These Proud Boys are avowed white nationalists and have been called to stand up against a fair and legal election," D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) said. And D.C. Council Chairman Phil Mendelson (D) said a beautiful weekend "was ruined by white supremacists who came to our city seeking violence."

Bowser said that the city had encouraged Harry's to close early for the protest weekend and that the bar was not open after 4 p.m. on either Dec. 11 or Dec. 12. The mayor declined to draw a connection between the violence late that Saturday and the bar around which Proud Boys and other Trump supporters continued to gather through the night.

But D.C. Council member Brooke Pinto (D), who represents the ward in which Harry's is located, said the bar's complicity in allowing "hate groups" to gather should not be overlooked.

"I am angered and troubled by the violence committed by white supremacists in our city and in Ward 2 over the weekend and last month," Pinto wrote in a statement to The Post. "Harry's disregard for public health guidance as these hate groups have gathered in their establishment without masks and without being socially distant before taking to the streets and further jeopardizing the health and safety of District residents is absolutely unacceptable."

Pinto said she would like to see greater enforcement of the District's coronavirus protocols and would "encourage local businesses to protect our residents first," though she did not elaborate on how businesses such as Harry's might do so. Boyle did not respond to Pinto's comments.

In all, Harry's has been cited for flouting the city's mask ordinance three times since October.

On Oct. 10, an investigator from the D.C. Alcoholic Beverage Regulation Administration noticed a server was not wearing a mask as he waited on tables filled with patrons who were also barefaced though they were not actively eating or drinking, according to the ABRA incident report.

The investigator issued Boyle a warning and noted that Boyle said it "would not happen again."

A month later, on the night before the "Million MAGA March," a city investigator reported patrons were not wearing masks and were moving about the bar freely, gathering in large groups and flouting social distancing requirements. Outside the bar, he wrote, more than 50 people were gathered listening to loud music and drinking in the street. The investigator called the situation "unacceptable" and issued Harry's a $1,000 fine.

Boyle "admitted that he lost control of the establishment," according to the ABRA report. The investigator found "the establishment was basically operating as normal prior to Covid."

The next day, after thousands of Trump's most ardent supporters packed D.C. streets and marched to the Supreme Court, many gathered at Harry's to celebrate.

Dozens of maskless people were gathered outside the bar, waiting to be seated, the ABRA investigator wrote, while patrons inside crowded around small tables and moved freely around the establishment without donning face coverings.

The ABRA investigator slapped Harry's with another $1,000 fine, its second in as many days.

Patrick Young, 37, spent most of Dec. 12 at Black Lives Matter Plaza, poised to defend the space in which racial justice activists have gathered for months.

Throughout the day, he said, he saw "marauding bands of Proud Boys" try to make their way past police lines and into the plaza.

He was worried that as the night wore on, and as far-right agitators imbibed more, the threat of violence would increase, he said.

The next day, he called Harry's Bar, asking to speak with the owner. To Young's surprise, Boyle answered the phone.

"I told him I was very concerned that the bar was becoming a base of operations for the Proud Boys," said Young, an organizer with the activist coalition ShutDown DC.

It and other local social justice groups have for weeks encouraged their members to call Harry's and encourage the bar to denounce the Proud Boys and close during large pro-Trump gatherings.

Downtown hotels also received calls and emails from D.C. residents and activists imploring them to deny service to visiting Trump supporters.

ShutDown DC organizers said they will continue to lobby business owners and city officials to do more. Harry's, they said, will remain priority No. 1. The group launched an online petition this week calling on ABRA to revoke the bar's liquor license.

"As long as people are coming into our community with the expressed intent of terrorizing our friends and neighbors, we are going to work to keep each other safe," Young said.

'This will save lives': Drug paraphernalia decriminalization bill becomes law in District

WJLA 7 // Elliot Henney

The possession of drug paraphernalia in Washington D.C. has been decriminalized, according to the Drug Policy Alliance.

Just before Christmas last week, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser allowed the Opioid Overdose Prevention Act of 2019 (B23-0054) to become law. The bill removes criminal penalties for possession of drug paraphernalia for personal use.

The bill also allows for organizations in the District to distribute harm reduction supplies, previously criminalized under DC law.

Queen Adesuyi, the Policy Manager for the Office of National Affairs at the Drug Policy Alliance said that with COVID-19 cases skyrocketing, it was important to get the legislation passed.

This legislation will 100% save lives," Adesuyi told ABC7's Elliot Henney. "And in fact, not doing this, the status quo would have continued to put people at risk and not save lives. It's so critical and it couldn't have come at a better time.

Adesuyi says that harm reduction supplies are essential because shared and unsafe methods for snorting or smoking various drugs can put people at risk for COVID-19, as well as hepatitis C transmission, HIV, and both viral and bacterial infections.

One common example of an unsafe ingestion method, often seen in movies and on tv, would be rolled-up dollar bills, which have tons of bacteria.

Adesuyi said these types of harm-reduction methods also provide intravenous drug users with other options for ingesting drugs.

What people often forget is that people use drugs in a whole bunch of different ways," Adesuyi said. "I think in a time like now, where we're dealing with a compounded public health crisis, with COVID-19 on top of the increasingly worsening overdose crisis in DC, it's not a better time than now to finally get past stigma.

Following the District's deadliest year of overdose fatalities in 2017, the D.C. Council unanimously voted to allow for the distribution of fentanyl test strips for personal use, and then passed legislation to decriminalize the life-saving strips a year later.

Those test strips became a lifeline for many addicts who were given the ability to identify the presence of highly-potent and potentially deadly fentanyl in unregulated drugs. The strips can also be used to test injectable drugs, powders, and pills, according to Adesuyi.

It's important for people to know what's in their drug supplies, regardless of your opinions of their drug use," Adesuyi said. "It's unfair to allow people to walk into a situation where they're just wanting to use drugs, and then die accidentally.

While the decriminalization of fentanyl test strips was a step in the right direction, the Drug Policy Alliance says they worked tirelessly with HIPS, a DC-based harm-reduction organization, to get DC Council to take bigger steps towards reducing overdose deaths by decriminalizing drug paraphernalia more broadly.

It's a huge step forward for the health and livelihood of people who use drugs," Adesuyi said.

D.C. region leaders pitch plan to build stronger post-pandemic economy

The Washington Post // Michael Brice-Saddler

More than 50 local leaders have mapped out an economic recovery strategy for the Washington area that they say would leave it more unified, resilient and prosperous than before the novel coronavirus upended the region.

Connected DMV — a group representing the local academic, nonprofit, public and private sectors — initially came together in March 2019 to drive economic growth in the D.C. area. When the pandemic struck a year later, the group pivoted to creating what it calls a “strategic renewal” task force, which issued a report this month with 12 initiatives to remedy the region’s social and economic challenges.

They range from a coordinated regional contact-tracing system to the creation of a pandemic biodefense facility. One effort calls for an economic development plan that permeates the jurisdictional barriers that have previously caused Maryland, Virginia and the District to operate in silos.

“Long-term, if we’ll survive in this new world and thrive ... we need to paint a different picture on where we’re headed, not try to get back to where we were,” said Stu Solomon, chief executive and president of Connected DMV. “In the past, single organizations have tried to do some of these things. The companies, the ecosystem is here — it just hasn’t been brought together.”

Solomon, who serves on the Greater Washington Board of Trade, acknowledged that many of the task force’s proposals are ambitious and would require unprecedented levels of coordination. But he argued the D.C. region has the resources to pull them off and has simply failed to work collectively to do so in the past.

He cited a Brookings Institution analysis of the 53 largest U.S. metropolitan areas between 2008 and 2018 as evidence of these shortcomings. The D.C. region ranked 52nd in the racial inclusion category, which compares median earnings and employment among different demographic groups, and placed just 25th in overall economic growth.

The pandemic has shone a spotlight on how much the region — which overall is far wealthier and better educated than the United States as a whole — is underperforming, he said.

“It’s unacceptable where we are in our rankings. That’s a reflection on us collectively,” Solomon said. “Our collective response needs to be strong and persistent; it can’t be episodic.”

Members of the task force, which includes former D.C. mayor Anthony Williams, Metro General Manager Paul J. Wiedefeld and Greater Washington Board of Trade President Jack McDougle, among others, met monthly between May and October to discuss and vote on each initiative. Conversations about how each will be funded, staffed and delivered will continue into next year, Solomon said. While some of the task force's goals are likely to take years to carry out, others are already underway.

Radha Muthiah, president and chief executive of the Capital Area Food Bank, is anchoring an initiative on "regional resilience" exercises, which aims to shore up greater Washington's readiness for unplanned events. The first of these exercises took place Dec. 3 and scrutinized the Washington region's ability to get food into the hands of those who need it most during the pandemic.

The number of people in the region who don't have a stable source of food ballooned from 400,000 to 600,000 during the pandemic, Muthiah said, adding that the food bank has distributed double the amount of food in the past eight months compared with the same period in 2019.

As part of the exercise, Muthiah and her team created a hunger heat map that pinpointed what areas of the region needed the most food, and how frequently, to better understand the area's food distribution network. The map laid bare wealth inequalities that affected people's access to quality groceries, which varied drastically across greater Washington, she said.

During a future public health emergency, improved coordination between leaders in D.C., Maryland and Virginia will be a crucial part of optimizing food purchasing and distribution, Muthiah said. Area food distributors need to communicate more effectively with one another, sharing information about which communities need support.

"The pandemic really brought these inequalities that were already existing to the forefront," she said. "This is our opportunity to rebuild from this crisis in ways that are much more equitable, and ways that enable people to participate and benefit from our regional economy."

The next resilience exercises will begin in the spring and may address health care, weather disasters or cybersecurity issues, Muthiah said. Her team is walking through various scenarios to consider what other issues might manifest during future crises.

"So we're ready to act in the face of another shock if it presents itself," she added.

Regional collaboration is the common thread among all 12 of the task force's initiatives, as is making greater Washington a more prominent player in pandemic-prevention efforts.

One objective, led by MedStar Health, calls for leaders in D.C., Maryland and Virginia to combine their respective contact tracing systems in hopes of better detecting future outbreaks of the coronavirus so leaders can more quickly reopen closed businesses, schools and houses of worship. Another would establish a Global Pandemic Biodefense Center in the D.C. area, tasked with generating human antibodies that could neutralize virus-causing pathogens.

Rockville-based nonprofit Biohealth Innovation will partner with the University System of Maryland and Maryland Tech Council to create the biodefense center. Rich Bendis, the chief executive of Biohealth Innovation, has previously pointed out that 40 percent of the companies that received the most funding from Operation Warp Speed — the federal government’s vaccine initiative — are based in Montgomery County.

“That’s the type of industry that Maryland has been working on for so long,” said Maryland Commerce Secretary Kelly Schulz, who is assisting in the regional biodefense center initiative. “To build an ecosystem with a pandemic center closer to where we are would be something that’s beneficial to the state, region, country and the world, quite honestly,”

Solomon and other leaders who wrote the report say creating a more inclusive economy is just as important as restoring it. Williams, now chief executive of the Federal City Council, is heading an initiative that seeks to mitigate the region’s digital divide, expanding Internet access while building digital literacy among low-income adults, community college students and seniors.

Asked whether he thought the task force’s plan to build a stronger post-pandemic economy in the D.C. area was realistic, Williams responded, “It is.” He recalled how the region has previously banded together to provide dedicated annual capital funding for Metro and how Arlington and Alexandria teamed up to bring Amazon’s second headquarters to Northern Virginia.

“For a long time, the District suffered because there was a divide from D.C. and the rest of the region on coordinating technology, health care and transportation,” Williams said. “As we’re entering a new stage of the city’s growth, and a new era for the region, I think we’ll begin to address these important issues.”

Attorneys general in D.C., Md. and Va. support lawsuit demanding ATF regulate 'ghost guns'

The Washington Post // Tom Jackman

The attorneys general of D.C., Maryland and Virginia are supporting a federal lawsuit seeking to have the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives regulate the widely sold parts of homemade “ghost guns” as firearms, in an attempt to stop the steadily increasing use of the untraceable firearms in crimes across the country.

The parts for a “ghost gun” can be ordered easily on the Internet, and instructional videos show how an “80 percent lower” part of a gun can be milled and drilled into a fully functional “100 percent” lower. That piece then can be combined with the unregulated upper parts — the trigger, the harrel, the firing pin — to make a gun that has no serial number and requires no background check.

After D.C. police began recovering increasing numbers of the guns, often connected to crimes, the District this year passed emergency legislation banning the kits used to make ghost guns. D.C. Attorney General Karl A. Racine also filed a consumer protection lawsuit in June against one of the largest makers of the gun parts, Polymer80, which is pending.

In 2017, D.C. police found three such guns, and by last year that number had risen to 116. In those three years, Racine said, nine ghost guns were reportedly involved in homicides. This year, local and federal police had recovered 282 ghost guns in the city as of Dec. 17, according to the District’s Department of Forensic Sciences.

The local attorneys general joined 16 other state attorneys general in a brief supporting a federal suit filed in the Southern District of New York by the cities of Syracuse, N.Y., San Jose, Chicago and Columbia, S.C., and the pro-gun-control group Everytown for Gun Safety, against ATF, the Justice Department and the U.S. attorney general. The suit targets several “interpretive rulings” issued by ATF to gun parts manufacturers in recent years, stating that the unfinished lower and upper parts of guns are not, themselves, firearms.

The ATF’s website says that “items such as receiver blanks, ‘castings’ or ‘machined bodies’ in which the fire-control cavity area is completely solid and un-machined have not reached the ‘stage of manufacture’ which would result in the classification of a firearm” under federal law.

The manufacturers then posted the ATF rulings on their websites to reassure customers that the parts they are buying are legal. Such rulings “encouraged and emboldened the ghost gun industry to sell its products nationwide,” even in states that have banned them, the filing said. Since 2015, D.C. and six states have enacted ghost-gun-specific statutes, the attorneys general said in their amicus brief.

There are about 80 online sellers of partially finished lower frames (for handguns) and receivers (for long guns). The ATF said last year that about 30 percent of guns recovered in California had no serial numbers. Ghost guns were used in mass shootings at Santa Monica College in 2013 and in Rancho Tehama, Calif., in 2017, made by men who were prohibited from legally buying weapons.

“The ATF’s reckless interpretation of the law and lack of regulation could lead to more untraceable guns on our streets, potentially putting Virginians and their families at risk,” Virginia Attorney General Mark R. Herring said in a news release.

The ATF has not yet responded to the suit in New York. But in a similar suit filed by the state of California, two fathers of ghost-gun shooting victims and the Giffords Law Center to Prevent Gun Violence, the agency defended its interpretation of the federal Gun Control Act of 1968. The bureau argued that “a receiver blank may not ‘readily be converted’ into a firearm,” because it requires numerous milling and metalworking steps, and “a working gun cannot be produced ‘without difficulty.’ ”

The unfinished gun parts are “therefore not a ‘firearm’ within the meaning of the statute,” Justice Department attorneys said last month in the California case.

The Gun Control Act defines a firearm as any weapon that is “designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive.” Kathleen Konopka, the D.C. deputy attorney general for public advocacy, said in an interview that many states patterned their laws after the federal act. “To our surprise, ATF has now interpreted this otherwise. We feel that’s a misinterpretation of federal and state statutes,” she said.

Making a gun at home is legal, and has long been done by firearms enthusiasts. And the advent of 3-D printers has made the process easier, though experts say those guns made with plastic do not function well for long, and D.C. police have found few of them.

But only licensed firearms dealers may sell guns, so making a gun with no serial number — or buying one from someone who did — is attractive to criminals. There is no background check, in which people with criminal records or domestic violence or mental health issues can be prevented from a purchase, and no serial number makes it much harder for police to track the history of a gun and determine who bought it or who owned it after it was used in a crime.

“The fact that they’re not regulated,” Konopka said, “has really added to the crime in the city and decreased the ability to solve those crimes.”

“The ATF’s interpretation of the law,” Maryland Attorney General Brian E. Frosh said in a release, “allows criminals who cannot pass a background check to obtain untraceable firearms. It is a flat-out danger to law abiding Americans.”

The mayor of Washington, D.C., announced on Wednesday that Dec. 24, 2020, will be known as "Dr. Anthony S. Fauci Day" in the nation's capital.

Mayor Muriel Bowser said that Fauci, a top infectious disease expert in the United States, would be honored for the services he provided during the coronavirus pandemic.

"In honor of Dr. Fauci's 80th birthday tomorrow, I proclaim Thursday, December 24, 2020, 'Dr. Anthony S. Fauci Day' in Washington, DC. We are incredibly proud to count Dr. Fauci among the many DC residents who are sacrificing so much to keep our communities healthy and safe," Bowser said.

Fauci has looked over the White House's response to the coronavirus pandemic, which continues to plague the nation as more than 3,000 people died of complications from the disease on Wednesday, according to the New York Times coronavirus tracker.

California Gov. Gavin Newsom applauded the announcement with the simple reply: "Love this."

In her announcement, Bowser touted Fauci’s service to six presidents, his commitment to serve as President-elect Joe Biden’s chief medical advisor, and his love for the Washington Nationals. She encouraged all Washingtonians to “join me in wishing him the happiest of birthdays.”

Fauci has been a steady voice and reliable source of advice for many Americans throughout the pandemic. Bowser’s proclamation called him “a shining light in dark times for the nation, promoting truth over fear and giving Americans hope in their government.”

But the longtime Ward 3 resident (he’s lived in Wesley Heights since 1977) has also become quite the local celebrity.

A Washington Nationals superfan, Fauci threw out the ceremonial first pitch on Opening Day this year (And we forgive him for missing the plate by... a lot. The team didn’t have such a hot season either.) Fauci also did a Q&A with the Nationals’ face-of-the-franchise Ryan Zimmerman.

He also inspired the popular to-go cocktail the Fauci Pouchy, which helped keep a D.C. harbor weather the economic crisis after the pandemic took hold in the spring.

Fauci joins a ton of other famous Washingtonians who got a day devoted to them in D.C. Last year, the city celebrate Taraji P. Henson Day in February and RBG Day on the late Supreme Court Justice’s 86th birthday in March.

We don't know exactly how Fauci will celebrate this honor from the city, but perhaps with take out from one of his favorite D.C. restaurants? (He says he orders take out from a restaurant in the city several times a week.)

do you think he'll celebrate by ordering in chef geoff's? <https://t.co/rTZSyerJOU>

— Chelsea Cirruzzo 🇺🇸 (@ChelseaCirruzzo) December 23, 2020

Fauci reportedly works 18 hour days, between constant TV appearances, meetings, calls with governors and answering emails “until I'm so tired I can't do anymore.” But we hope that for Christmas—for his birthday, for Fauci Day—he gets a moment to rest.

Fauci says he'll be home with his wife this Christmas Eve, forgoing his usual plans: a traditional Italian meal at his sister's home in Alexandria. He's encouraged the rest of us to stay home too, but not to fret: Fauci announced on a CNN/Sesame Street town hall last week that he personally visited the North Pole to give Santa Claus his COVID-19 vaccine.

Dr. Fauci, the director for the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease, has been a mainstay during the COVID pandemic, offering guidance to the White House.

"We are incredibly proud to count him among the many DC residents who are sacrificing so much to keep our communities healthy and safe," Mayor Bowser said, adding, "I issue this honor on behalf of all Washingtonians in gratitude and recognition of Dr. Fauci's service to our nation and our city."

Earlier this year, Dr. Fauci threw out the ceremonial first pitch in July, kicking off the reduced season at Nationals Park.

Locals Weigh The Risk Of Holiday Travel Against Their Mental Health

WAMU/DCist // Matt Blitz, Margaret Barthel and Jenny Gathright

Mas Tadesse is thinking about flying to San Diego. Her close friend, a recent widow, lives there, and Tadesse was there last Christmas to support her friend and her twin daughters. If it weren't for the coronavirus, Tadesse says she would certainly be there again this year. And after months of isolation, she is thinking it might be worth taking on the risk of flying — with precautions like a mask and face shield — in order to get together with loved ones.

"I've also been in my house pretty much since March, with the exception of going out to exercise," Tadesse said. "What I mean is I get groceries delivered, I've seen no friends, no family. I've had funerals ... that have been on Zoom. It's been a really tough year. So for my mental health, I just feel like I will strongly consider getting out of town and going and supporting my friends."

Become a sponsor?

As she stood in line at a public testing site in Northwest D.C.'s Pleasant Plains neighborhood on Monday, Tadesse was still unsure of her holiday plans. If her coronavirus test comes back positive, she says, she will of course stay in her house by herself. But if it comes back negative, she's considering making that trip to San Diego.

"I'm still weighing my circumstances," Tadesse said. "I might do it in February or March and just be home for the holidays by myself."

The line to get tested stretched down the block. People were there for a mix of reasons: Some were concerned about potential exposure. Others were getting tested ahead of planned holiday travel — despite the consistent guidance from local officials who advise against it.

For Tadesse and others in the line, staying put for months on end feels unsustainable. So they are thinking about traveling, with precautions: Getting tested, driving instead of flying if they can. They know they can't entirely eliminate the health risk — but nine months into a pandemic, they say they are also taking their social needs into account, too. And while local officials have been consistently discouraging travel and holiday gatherings, some have also acknowledged that when guidance is too rigid, that can also lead to bad public health outcomes.

Testing has been a common and widely available pre-travel strategy for many locals, particularly with test turnaround time in D.C. holding steady between two and three days.

The numbers bear this out. More folks are getting tested now throughout the holiday season than they did in the summer and early fall. For example, the 7-day average of new tests taken in D.C. on October 16 was about 4,800. In the week leading up to Thanksgiving, the average of new tests taken in D.C. was nearly 8,000. As of December 22 and leading into the Christmas holiday, the 7-day average is almost 6,000.

Health experts say that testing is one way to reduce the risk of spreading the coronavirus, but it does not eliminate the risk of gathering entirely and should not replace wearing masks, distancing and quarantining.

“You can do everything you can to move that yardstick of safety a little bit in your favor,” said D.C. resident Michael Triozzi while in line Monday at the Pleasant Plains testing site. He planned to drive to North Carolina to meet up with family, assuming his test came back negative. “But there’s that knowledge that it’s imperfect. There’s that knowledge that it’s risky, and that’s ... troubling in a lot of ways.”

In the weeks following Thanksgiving, coronavirus cases have continued to trend up both regionally and nationwide. However, it remains unclear how much the holiday played a part in the increasing cases. As the New York Times reported, the so-called nationwide “Thanksgiving effect” may have only reinforced trends as opposed to beginning new ones.

Maryland hit a new daily coronavirus case record on November 19 — five days before Thanksgiving. That followed a steady increase since the fall. In D.C., one of the highest case counts since the start of the pandemic was on Thanksgiving Day with 220 new cases. This likely correlates with nearly 13,000 people being tested on the holiday, the highest number since testing began in the District.

Localities are responding by tightening some restrictions across the region. Last week, D.C. announced a halt on indoor dining beginning on December 23 and continuing through January 15. Libraries and museums will also close. Montgomery and Prince George’s Counties also prohibited indoor dining, at least for a few weeks while further limiting capacity at retail businesses, gyms and places of worship.

While significant, it’s not as comprehensive or restrictive as the stay-at-home orders issued by D.C, Maryland, Virginia back at the end of the March. This, despite community spread far beyond what it ever was in the spring.

Natalie Talis, a population health manager at Alexandria Health Department, said the record-setting spike is worrisome, especially given locals’ desire to travel.

“That is really concerning for us looking at all of the December holidays, because people want to gather,” she said. “And we know that gathering is what leads to the spread of more COVID.”

The convergence of the worst coronavirus surge yet with the holiday season is complicating the messaging strategy for public health officials. Some are hammering home the message they’ve been emphasizing from the beginning — stay home and socialize only among immediate household members — even if many community members aren’t complying.

“We know that people are sick of hearing from us right now to not gather and not to do all these things,” Talis admitted. “But we just can’t say it enough.”

In addition to the new restrictions, local officials are doubling down on their messaging from the Thanksgiving holiday, warning people about the potentially fatal consequences of gathering indoors with people outside your household.

In a video message last week, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser asked residents to “celebrate the holidays at home with your immediate household,” which mirrored her guidance ahead of Thanksgiving. Montgomery County is also continuing to tell people not to travel and to limit indoor gatherings for the Christmas holiday.

Others are trying to give locals at least some tools and tips for how to celebrate safely — and acknowledging the emotional burden of isolation during the holiday season.

In Alexandria, Talis says the health department is still primarily emphasizing guidance to stay home and not travel. A holiday brochure put out by the department offers suggestions to people planning to tell friends and family that they won’t be joining in-person holiday celebrations.

“Acknowledge feelings of disappointment and expect emotional responses,” the department recommends. “Explain that your decision is out of love for yourself and those you care about.”

But the same flyer also has guidance for what precautions people should take if they are determined to travel, including hosting only outdoor gatherings, wearing masks, limiting the number of guests and writing down the names and contact information for attendees in case someone later tests positive.

Talis says the department is trying to empower people to make good personal decisions — not shame them for wanting to see loved ones or terrify them with dire warnings, both of which could lead to people disengaging from public health guidance or even not cooperating with contact tracers.

“I personally believe that hope and feeling empowered is a much stronger motivator than fear and shame to doing anything. And so our messaging has always been straightforward that there is an element of personal responsibility here,” she said. “But we certainly don’t want people to be paralyzed with fear, to feel ashamed, because that just leads people to retreat away from the conversation.”

And she acknowledged the emotional toll the holidays can take, even without the burden of a pandemic.

“We’re really concerned, not just about people being sick with COVID, but the impact that this will have on people’s mental health,” she said. “So we’re really trying to message that people should look out for themselves.”

Dr. Jessica Smedley, a licensed clinical psychologist who works with clients and also led the D.C. Psychological Association’s COVID-19 task force, said she thinks local public health officials are “doing the best they can” with messaging, “given the circumstances of how this virus has been handled.”

The issue, Smedley said, is that the public health crisis has by its very nature exacerbated isolation, stress, depression and anxiety.

“I just don’t think we’re in an optimal situation where mental health and public health are perfectly aligned,” said Smedley. And in that non-optimal situation, “people are choosing whatever their safety protocols for their specific lives might be.”

Christina, a D.C. resident, was in line to get tested at the firehouse on Sherman Avenue on Monday. She said she wasn’t not sure the mayor’s guidance on travel had been effective.

“Whatever the D.C. government says, everyone knows they’re not going to enforce it,” she said “They say that ‘if you go to Pennsylvania, you must quarantine when you get back.’ Nobody does.” (Guidance from Bowser says that residents must either limit daily activities for 14 days after returning to the city from travel or limit activities for 3 to 5 days and then get a coronavirus test, though Bowser has said the rules would not be strictly enforced and were intended more as a tool for private institutions to manage travelers.)

Christina doesn’t have holiday travel plans: She attended counter protests to oppose the Proud Boys and Trump supporters who rallied in D.C. earlier this month, so she was getting tested as a precaution (She declined to share her last name because she did not want to publicize her involvement in those counterprotests.).

“It’s been hardest for me not being able to see my grandparents in Iowa,” she said. “They just turned 89 this year, and I know they’re not getting any younger. But I also know that I cannot visit them safely right now.”

Smedley said she is encouraging her clients to set small goals for themselves this holiday season, and to try to create new holiday traditions or adapt old ones to these abnormal times. Some clients have had success with doing virtual game nights and other activities over Zoom — even if many people are “Zoomed out.” And Smedley also encourages people to go analog and make handwritten cards or messages to send to loved ones they can’t connect with in person.

Above all, she said, “Give each other grace and patience ... we are all essentially doing the best that we can.”

Exclusive: Violation notices show Solidcore operated in DC without license for years

FOX 5 // Evan Lambert

In November, the CEO of Solidcore announced the boutique fitness brand would defy a D.C. order banning indoor group fitness classes, leading to an investigation by regulators that revealed the company's eight locations never had licenses to operate, according to public records obtained by FOX 5.

The notices from the Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs came with a cease and desist order in reference to the company operating group fitness classes after Mayor Muriel Bowser's order which banned them indoors.

One such notice said, "it has come to the attention of DCRA that all eight Solidcore locations appear to be operating without the applicable business license." The notice is accompanied by a fine of just over $2,000.

DCRA tells FOX 5 it has fined Solidcore nearly $16,000 for the license violations.

Solidcore opened in D.C. in 2013 and currently operates eight locations of its pilates-style studios, none of which have ever legally been allowed to operate, according to DCRA.

A spokeswoman for Solidcore provided records showing an application for a business license dated in 2018 and said the company believed it was licensed after submitting the paperwork.

DCRA says Solidcore never completed the application process and should have been aware it didn't have licenses for its locations because the licenses are required under D.C. law to be displayed.

"We count on District business owners and their attorneys to understand and adhere to the law. While we periodically conduct industry-specific blitzes, licensing investigations are largely complaint driven. In this instance, we didn't previously receive any complaints. As these high fines indicate, however, the price for not following the District's licensing laws is quite steep," reads a statement by DCRA.

In a letter to DCRA, Solidcore asks that the fines be reduced or eliminated, calling the issue an "administrative error."

Bryan Myers, Solidcore's president and chief operating officer, released the following statement:

"In late November, we were notified by DCRA that the city did not have [solidcore]'s business licenses on file. We were able to furnish, from our records, copies of our submitted paperwork from several years ago and immediately provided those to DCRA. We are in the process of appealing the citation which was issued for non-compliance in light of what appears to be an administrative error."

As of this month, Solidcore has current valid licenses.

D.C. Ban on Indoor Dining Begins Wednesday Night

December 23, 2020

The Washington Informer // Staff

The Bowser administration's ban on indoor dining in D.C. restaurants and bars amid recent surges in coronavirus cases goes into effect Wednesday at 10 p.m.

The temporary ban, part of an executive order issued by Mayor Muriel Bowser last week, lasts until Jan. 15 and aims to curtail the spread of the virus.

Outdoor dining, with the exception of a snow emergency, will be permitted, along with carryout and delivery orders.

The city health department says restaurants and bars account for 14 percent of the coronavirus outbreaks between August and November, WUSA-TV (Channel 9) reported.

The administration has launched a Bridge Fund program supported with $35 million to help restaurants and bars keep their employees and stay open while the pandemic persists.

As of Wednesday, D.C. has 27,226 coronavirus cases and 751 virus-related deaths, according to health department statistics.

Mayor reinstates 'pause' in indoor dining at restaurants, bars

The Washington Blade // Lou Chibbaro Jr.

D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser's announcement on Dec. 18 that indoor dining and indoor bar service for the city's bars and restaurants would be banned beginning Dec. 23 until at least Jan. 15 came about one week after one or more unidentified vandals damaged the heaters used by the D.C. gay bar The Dirty Goose for its outdoor seating area.

The two developments were not related to each other. But Keaton Fedak, general manager of The Dirty Goose, told D.C.'s Channel 7 News last Friday that the two things appeared to be more signs of the trials and tribulations faced by his and other similar establishments this year in the midst of the coronavirus pandemic.

He told the TV news station the vandalism felt personal "because I work here every day and we put so much time and effort into creating this nice environment."

Kristen Metzger, a spokesperson for D.C. police, told the Washington Blade police have no information "to suggest this incident is motivated by hate bias in relation to the LGBTQ community."

Justin Parker, co-owner of The Dirty Goose, told the Washington Blade he and his staff have a "possible idea" who vandalized their outdoor seating area that D.C. bars and restaurants refer to as their "Streatery" because the city is allowing them to use space on the street that had previously been used for cars to park.

"Damnit, we are trying our HARDEST to create a fun, cozy, and comfortable atmosphere during the hardest year ever," The Dirty Goose says in a Dec. 15 Facebook posting. "And, yet still, some people are just not having it. We will be closed this evening [Dec. 15] as we wait for replacement parts for our fire pits due to last night's vandalism." The posting said the bar would reopen on Thursday, Dec. 17.

In response to Mayor Bowser's order banning indoor dining and bar service until Jan. 15, The Dirty Goose is among the D.C. gay bars that have said they will remain open for outdoor service and carryout and delivery service, according to a separate Dec. 19 posting on its Facebook page.

Douglas Schantz, owner of Nellie's Sports Bar, another gay bar located on U Street across the street from The Dirty Goose, said he too plans to remain open for carryout and delivery service during the ban on indoor service.

David Perruzza, owner of the Adams Morgan gay sports bar Pitchers and its adjoining lesbian bar A League of Her Own, announced in a Facebook posting on Dec. 19 that he will not stay open during the indoor dining ban.

“To all of our customers, we thank you for all of your loyalty and support,” his Facebook message says. “We will be temporarily shut down until January 15th. We simply can’t survive without indoor dining,” his message says.

One day earlier, on Dec. 18, Perruzza posted another message urging customers to come to Pitchers and A League of Her Own last weekend, the last weekend before the indoor service ban would take effect.

“Please come out this weekend and support the staff who will basically be out of jobs for Christmas due to the mayor’s new restrictions,” the posting says. “Honestly, we don’t know where she is going that she thinks we are all packed, but we have been struggling,” Perruzza’s message continues. “Now this will definitely hurt us and the employees even more,” the message says. It asks customers and supporters to consider contributing to a GoFundMe site that the bar set up to support its employees.

Perruzza is among the city’s bar and restaurant owners who have raised strong objections to the mayor’s decision to reinstate a ban on indoor dining and bar service after lifting an earlier indoor service ban put in place earlier this year. Restaurant and bar representatives also raised strong objections to Bowser’s separate order earlier this month banning the sale of alcoholic beverages in bars and restaurants after 10 p.m.

Restaurant and bar representatives have argued that there is no scientific data or convincing evidence that indoor dining or the serving of alcoholic beverages in restaurants and bars after 10 p.m. has resulted in a higher rate of coronavirus infection. Perruzza is among those who have argued that action being taken by the mayor to restrict and now close indoor service will likely result in people gathering at private parties in people’s homes, where there are no safeguards for preventing the spread of the virus such as social distancing and mask wearing rules that are being followed in restaurants and bars.

When asked about this at a press conference on Monday, Bowser disputed such arguments, saying indoor dining at restaurants has been consistently cited as one of the top four types of activities found by contact tracing to be the source of coronavirus infection.

“So, we have been dialing back for several weeks, many weeks, all types of activities,” Bowser said referring to the city’s response to the spike in new cases in D.C. and the surrounding suburbs.

“So, we’re very focused right now like jurisdictions all around us and all around the country how to dial back even more activity,” she said. “And we know this is a limited time and we’re asking everybody to make this sacrifice so that hospital workers won’t be overwhelmed following these holidays.”

Bowser noted that the latest restrictions continue to allow outdoor dining and carryout and delivery services for restaurants and bars.

Gay nightlife advocate Mark Lee, who served as coordinator of the D.C. Nightlife Council, a trade association for local restaurants, bars, and nightclubs, until he was furloughed due to the COVID economic fallout, called the mayor's latest action an unnecessary burden on restaurants and bars.

"D.C. restaurant and bar operators are exasperated about Mayor Bowser's decision to shutter all indoor service, and both hundreds of nightlife venues and thousands of hospitality service professionals are now economically skating on even thinner financial ice they can hear cracking under them," Lee said.

"With most outdoor service options increasingly unfeasible for venues and unpopular with patrons in the winter cold, and with carryout and delivery not a financially sustainable business activity, it's a very bleak situation confronting our community establishments already drowning in a sea of rising debt," Lee said.

"The ultimate irony," Lee added, "is that closing down bars and restaurants, including gay establishments, will only spawn the proliferation of more private gatherings in people's homes, which is the number one cause of infection."

'It was just sad': Restaurant owners work to rehire, keep connections with furloughed staff

The GW Hatchet // December 23, 2020

For many working in the food industry, restaurants are not just a place of work. Coworkers are like family.

Saying goodbye to some of those family members was one of the most difficult parts of the COVID-19 pandemic, Tonic at Quigley's Managing Partner Jeremy Pollok said. Tonic laid off about 75 percent of its employees in mid-March, cutting its staff down to about 25 people.

"You get really close with people and then all of a sudden – I've never seen anything like it, people are just gone," Pollok said.

In the past nine months, restaurants across the District have been forced to lay off staff, reduce menu offerings, temporarily shut down or permanently shutter. Restaurant owners across Northwest D.C. said the personal toll of the pandemic on their businesses is just as bad as the financial one, and they've tried to help out their former employees by recommending them for other jobs or creating new business models to get employees rehired.

The personal toll of the pandemic

Constantine Stavropoulos, the owner and CEO of the Tryst Trading Company, which owns The Diner in Adams Morgan, said the pandemic and related layoffs have taken a toll on staff morale.

Some of the people who were laid off had been working at The Diner for more than a decade, and he said it hurt for him to lay off staff who depended on their jobs to support their livelihoods.

"This is my life, it's been my life for 22 years now, and it's the life of my family," he said. "On a personal level, it was just sad not to have staff there, not to go to work and see faces and see people that we know."

The Tryst Trading Company's staff shrunk from 324 to six employees after the shutdown in mid-March, but they've since been able to "slowly build it back up." Staff is required to wear masks and gloves at all times and take their temperatures when coming into work.

Although The Diner has employed both outdoor and indoor seating in the past months, Stavropoulos said sales are still down about 80 to 85 percent.

"We're all about community gathering, coming together," Stavropoulos said. "Tryst is like one big public living room. So the idea of not being able to share and have the community come, it was a big hit to us. It was a big hit to all restaurants, but ours in particular in the sense that we weren't doing a lot of to-go business."

Since 1958, Ben's Chili Bowl on U Street has withstood long-term construction and riots, but the D.C. classic faced one of its biggest challenges yet in the pandemic – sales were down 90 percent overnight after the shutdown in March and the restaurant has not offered indoor dining since March 15.

Vida Ali, one of the family members that owns the restaurant, said the U Street location quickly pivoted their business model to rely on delivery and contactless pickup services like Uber Eats, GrubHub and Toast. Ali said some workers had young kids or lived with elderly people and were worried about coming in to work, so the owners gave employees the choice to come back.

Despite the financial challenges presented by the pandemic, the restaurant has donated about 6,000 meals to hospital workers, teachers and protesters in the past nine months. Shortly after, Ben's Chili Bowl started to receive monetary donations with requests to send food to hospitals around D.C.

"People started hearing that we were doing that," Ali said. "And then they started donating money to us and saying, 'Hey, can you do some for Washington Hospital Center? Can you do some for GW?'"

Working to rehire staff

Some restaurant owners said they needed to recreate business to get staff rehired by expanding take-out options or launching new dining options.

Dan Simons, the co-owner of Farmers Restaurant Group, said in mid-March the company laid off 1,100 employees across its locations in D.C., Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

To get back some employees, the company launched an e-commerce platform called Founding Farmers Market & Grocery in which customers could purchase anything in their supply chain, from prepped meals for brunch at home to flour, hand sanitizer and toilet paper. The group also added Founding Farmers chocolate, a collection of house-made chocolates available for pick up and delivery, to their product line.

The new business model allowed the company to rehire about 800 employees to fulfill the online orders, he said.

"We diversified the operations by just expanding the product line to anything that would naturally come through our supply chain that we knew that our customers wanted or needed at home," Simons said.

Farmers Restaurant Group employees are required to go through an in-person health screening before each shift, and the company employed an app that allows employees to track their co-workers' health and even conduct a health screening from home.

The group also publishes an updated COVID-19 dashboard that details employee health including confirmed coronavirus cases, flu vaccinations, days of paid sick leave and the safety precautions taken by each restaurant. He said the system helps build trust and confidence with staff who may be hesitant to return to work.

Kramerbooks and Afterwords, a 44-year-old bookshop and café in Dupont Circle, said the restaurant invested in 10 dining igloos, or “bubble tents,” to add to their 19th Street “streatery” as temperatures continue to plummet to keep business afloat. The joint also created a sandwich pop up called Fedwich, allowing them to rehire staff to fulfill orders.

“If you’re a server, there’s no tables to serve,” Salis said. “And having to tell those people they were furloughed was really tough. And then, you know, cooks, there’s no food to cook, and booksellers have no guests to talk to. And so we were able to reallocate a lot of those tasks to fulfill the orders.”

Looking ahead

As of early December, more than 80 D.C. restaurants and bars have closed due to the pandemic, including former GWorld vendors Burger, Tap & Shake and Bertucci’s.

Tonic at Quigley’s, Farmers Restaurant Group, Kramerbooks and Afterwords Café, The Diner and Ben’s Chili Bowl all received loans or grants from the Paycheck Protection Program, or the D.C. government, like the Streatery Winter Ready Grant Program, which set aside $4 million to help restaurants winterize with $6,000 grants.

Despite the funding, Mayor Muriel Bowser’s office implemented new restrictions on dining amid rising cases both in the District and nationwide. Effective Wednesday at 10 p.m. until 5 a.m. Friday, January 15, restaurants in the District may not seat patrons indoors, and non-essential businesses must use telework options.

Despite the added challenges of staying afloat, restaurant owners said they are still optimistic about the months ahead with the new dining innovations that have come about as a result of the pandemic, like the igloos and take-out options, which are permitted under the temporary regulations.

“It’s a very resilient industry,” Salis said. “There’s a lot of really great ideas not really always coming from us, calling around and asking what others are doing. And it’s really been a trying moment, but I’m very optimistic about what we’re going to do this winter.”

Ali, a Ben’s Chili Bowl owner, said the restaurant faced several challenges since the restaurant’s founding more than six decades ago, from the Metro’s construction in front of the store to the 1968 riots following the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. She said if Ben’s could withstand these obstacles, then the pandemic “shall pass.”

“When those kinds of things happened, it gave us more credibility in the community and in the culture,” Ali said. “This is a place that withstood the time, it withstood all the ups and downs and is still standing.”

The old Fletcher-Johnson school in Marshall Heights will soon get a large mixed-use makeover

The Washington Business Journal // Alex Koma

Gragg Cardona Partners will lead a development team to transform the old Fletcher-Johnson school and recreation center in Marshall Heights into a large mixed-use project.

Mayor Muriel Bowser announced Wednesday that the project will include up to 816 new homes over retail, with everything from apartments to for-sale townhomes and condos on the property. Gragg Cardona will partner with the Carding Group, Foundation Housing and H2 Design Build and the Marshall Heights Community Development Organization on the project.

The 15-acre property, located at 4650 Benning Road SE, has seen a variety of proposals for its reuse come and go after the school closed in 2008. It was eyed as everything from a potential charter school site to the home of a new hospital east of the Anacostia River (before the city settled on the St. Elizabeths East campus).

It's taken close to a year and a half to even find companies willing to take on the unusually shaped site's redevelopment. John Falcicchio, Bowser's chief of staff and the deputy mayor for planning and economic development, said the city only received one response to its request for proposals, but he is enthusiastic about the new vision for the area.

"This is a really good number of units for us to yield on a project that has been stalled and reimagined a few times over the course of a few years now," Falcicchio said in an interview.

Falcicchio is most enthusiastic about the "diversity of housing products" planned for the property. Though DMPED and the developers will still negotiate over the exact unit mix, at least 30% of the site will be set aside as affordable. Those will be designed to reach people between 30% and 50% of the median family income for the rental units and 50% and 80% of the for-sale units.

There will also be some affordable senior housing, similar to some of Gragg Cardona and Carding's other senior projects east of the river. Units at Fletcher-Johnson will range from studios to three-bedroom options.

All of this will sit above roughly 20,000 square feet of retail, which DMPED hopes to see filled with some sort of fresh food or restaurant options, considering the city's issues luring those businesses to wards 7 and 8.

Falcicchio noted that the Gragg Cardona team worked with the community to refine these plans, considering that neighbors have long asked for a mixed-use development on the site to revive the area. Fletcher-Johnson was pitched as a potential charter location in 2014, but no operators expressed interest. DMPED took over soon afterward, issuing a new RFP for the project in July 2019 and extending the response deadline several times to find some takers.

“A former school, this site is one of the largest and most valuable parcels of property in the District,” Councilman Vince Gray, D-Ward 7, said in a statement. “We are now one step closer to fully activating the Fletcher-Johnson site for the benefit of the Marshall Heights community in particular and Ward 7 in general.”

This will be the largest project yet Gragg Cardona has led in the District. The Petworth-based firm has partnered on smaller efforts on the U Street corridor and at St. Elizabeths East in the past.

D.C. Selects Developers For 816-Unit Project To Replace Abandoned Middle School

December 23, 2020

Bis Now // Jon Banister

A major new development is moving forward on the 15-acre site of a former middle school in D.C.'s Ward 7.

Mayor Muriel Bowser's administration announced Wednesday it selected a team led by Gragg Cardona Partners to build 816 units and retail on the Fletcher-Johnson Middle School site at 4650 Benning Road SE.

Gragg Cardona, a D.C.-based Certified Business Enterprise, is partnering with Foundation Housing, Carding Group, HQ Design Build and Marshall Heights Community Development Organization.

"In 2020, we have a renewed focus on equity and making sure people of color lead our development teams," Deputy Mayor for Planning and Economic Development John Falcicchio told Bisnow. "So with this award, we actually do see a team that's led by a company owned by people of color."

The team plans to build a mix of apartments, condos, townhouses and assisted living units, with at least 30% of the homes being set aside as affordable. The project is also planned to include 20K SF of retail, and the District hopes to bring new fresh food offerings to the site.

"This campus has sat vacant for nearly a decade and we are proud to finally move forward on delivering the housing and amenities that the residents of Ward 7 asked for," Bowser said in a statement.

Fletcher-Johnson Middle School closed in 2008, after which the building was leased to public charter schools and used as a temporary space for Woodson High School during its renovation. It has been vacant since 2011.

D.C. first started its process to redevelop the site in 2014 with a request for offers, but it didn't make an award. The District restarted the process of seeking developers in 2017, introducing the site at an event in March 2017, and then it officially released the request for proposals in July 2019.

Bowser touted the selection of a team to build residential on the site as a step toward the goal she set last year of building 36,000 new housing units in the District by 2025. Between January 2019 and July 2020, her administration said it produced 10,658 units, with 1,692 of them set aside as affordable.

The Fletcher-Johnson development needs the D.C. Council to pass the amended Comprehensive Plan before it can move forward, as it increases the density envisioned for the site. The council failed to pass the Comprehensive Plan this year, but Falcicchio said he hopes it can pass it in Q1 and allow the project to break ground by 2022.

"This is a good example of a project we have when we say the Comprehensive Plan is necessary to get projects moving forward and give certainty to neighborhoods that have been asking for improvements," Falcicchio said. "There are steps that need to take place before it can break ground, but the market needs certainty for projects to go forward."

Gragg Cardona also has a senior assisted living project moving forward at the intersection of Kenilworth Avenue NE and Eastern Avenue in Ward 7. The developer received $78M in financing from the D.C. Housing Finance Agency in September to break ground on the 157-unit project.

"On behalf of Gragg Cardona Partners and the rest of the Fletcher Johnson Community Partners team, we are humbled and honored to be trusted by the Marshall Heights, Benning Ridge, and Capitol View communities, and the leadership of the District of Columbia, to join with them in reimagining the Fletcher-Johnson Campus as an exciting place to live, work, and play, and a center of community life and prosperity," Gragg Cardona partner Oussama Souadi wrote in an emailed statement to Bisnow.

Bowser taps alumnus Robert Contee as her pick for next MPD chief

The GW Hatchet // Jarrod Wardwell and Rio Matsumoto

Mayor Muriel Bowser named GW alumnus Robert Contee III as her choice to be the next chief of the Metropolitan Police Department during a press conference Tuesday.

If confirmed by the D.C. Council, Contee will succeed Peter Newsham, who announced last month he will step down to head the Prince William County Police Department after leading MPD for more than three years. Contee, a D.C. native who's worked for MPD for 31 years since he joined the department as a cadet during his senior year of high school, said he hopes to focus on reducing violent crime, which currently stands at record-high levels, and fostering community engagement across the District.

"It is my great honor to lead the Metropolitan Police Department, to be the standard of excellence for policing in the 21st century," Contee said at the press conference. "There's room at the table for anyone and everyone who is committed to ensuring focused, balanced and fair policing in our nation's capital. It's time to go to work."

He said he plans to listen to local residents to ensure the department's crime-fighting strategy grounded in "communication, cooperation, collaboration and participation" aligns with the community that he hopes to involve in open discussion.

With community engagement as one of his top priorities, Contee said he expects MPD officers "to demonstrate compassion for people wherever they are on the road of life" and resolve conflict with care and discretion to forge a partnership with community members.

"It has been my distinct honor to serve this city for all of my adult life," Contee said. "You can expect me to model the behavior that I expect from you. You can expect fairness, and I expect you to be fair with members of the community. You can expect me to build relationships because we cannot have partnership without relationship."

Contee said that as assistant chief, he created a training program in which officers visit the National Museum of African American History and Culture to learn about and understand the experiences of African Americans.

MPD's website states that before he became assistant chief, Contee served as commander of three of the city's eight police districts, and Bowser said he has also overseen three of the department's five bureaus.

Contee earned his bachelor's degree in professional studies with a concentration in political science at GW, according to MPD's website.

Contee said the current rate of crime in D.C., where more than 800 people have been shot this year, is “unacceptable,” and he plans to hold violent offenders accountable to ensure safety is enforced within crime-ridden communities.

“I know there are many families in our communities that seek justice for loved ones that have been victims of violence, and I assure you that the Metropolitan Police Department will be relentless in our pursuit of criminals that make communities unsafe,” he said.

Contee said his immediate priorities as chief will be to ensure New Year’s celebrations and the presidential inauguration remain within the boundaries of public health and safety protocols amid the COVID-19 pandemic.

Bowser said she decided to select Contee for the job because of his longstanding familiarity and understanding of D.C. and its communities.

“Not only is he going to bring his experience as an officer but as a resident of this town as a Black boy and now a Black man who has experienced the best and worst of Washington D.C. to the table, to all of those discussions,” Bowser said.

Bowser noted how Contee’s relatability to the city’s youth drives his ambitions for the department’s role in the city.

“What strikes me most about Chief Contee’s many many experiences and talents is his belief in young people,” she said. “When we spoke last week, he said the highest honor for him is to give back to the city that raised him and that becoming chief is a testament to what happens when you give kids a fair shot.”

Outgoing MPD Chief Peter Newsham congratulated Contee on his appointment and attributed his experience with MPD and his native ties to the District to his character and qualification to serve as chief.

“His story is the man who he is,” Newsham said. “I could not be more proud of him today. He has a very deep bench at MPD that will support him, and I know that he will be successful in this job and will continue to move the Metropolitan Police Department in a positive direction.”

The Head Of D.C.'s 911 Agency Is Resigning

WAMU/DCist // Nathan Diller

Karima Holmes, the director of D.C.'s Office of Unified Communications, will step down next year. Mayor Muriel Bowser confirmed Holmes's departure from the agency, which handles the city's 911 and 311 calls, on Tuesday. Her resignation comes as the office faces an audit over its alleged mishandling of emergency dispatches.

During a press briefing, Bowser said Holmes let her know a few weeks ago that Holmes "had an incredible opportunity for herself and her family," but did not specify her reason for leaving. The mayor added that Holmes has improved OUC during her tenure.

But the agency is currently under intense scrutiny over its performance. District lawmakers and residents have raised alarms about inadequate OUC dispatches for years, and now the Office of the D.C. Auditor is moving forward with a formal review.

"This audit will evaluate the effectiveness of OUC's 911 Operations Division against national standards, review a sample of 911 call recording and data, evaluate OUC culture and training, review OUC's technological capabilities, and review OUC's internal investigations of past incidents," says a September solicitation to consulting firms for the audit. At the time, D.C. Auditor Kathleen Patterson told DCist she didn't expect the audit to be finished until at least summer 2021, depending on the bids for the project and OUC's level of cooperation.

A spokesperson for the office didn't immediately respond to DCist's request for comment about Holmes' departure. Holmes will stay in her role until she takes a new job outside of the region after the presidential inauguration in January, NBC Washington reports.

Bowser appointed Holmes, a veteran of emergency communications, in 2016. Holmes is credited with overhauling OUC's technical infrastructure, software platforms, and programs, including by introducing a 911 texting service and a new dispatching protocol for emergency responders.

Still, a number of incidents under her watch have raised questions about the agency's emergency-coordination abilities.

Last August, D.C. police recovered the bodies of three men who had been boating in the Potomac River and gone overboard. First responders requested help with the search, giving the location as near the Capital Cove Marina at Joint Base Anacostia-Bolling. But OUC dispatched land units to the Anacostia Community Boathouse — located more than five miles away and on the wrong river — news reporting showed.

D.C. Fire and Emergency Medical Services spokesperson Vito Maggiolo told DCist in August its incident commander heard the misdirected dispatch and "immediately corrected it." In a statement, an OUC spokesperson told the Washington Post the dispatcher had made an error.

Previously, in June, a D.C. woman died after first responders were dispatched to the wrong address in the wrong quadrant of the city. Holmes later apologized, per FOX 5.

When asked on Tuesday whether she's considering restructuring OUC or making other major changes, Mayor Bowser said no.

Holmes' departure follows those of two other public safety officials in the District. D.C. Fire and EMS Chief Gregory Dean announced his retirement in September, and last month news broke that Metropolitan Police Department Chief Peter Newsham will leave D.C. to head up Prince William County's police department in Virginia.

Is there an intersection between DC's rise in violence and the coronavirus pandemic?

The DC Line // Jonetta Rose Barras

DC Council member Charles Allen's Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety held a public roundtable with advocates and experts last week to explore alternatives to traditional policing. It was an interesting conversation; as many as 30 people offered a variety of ideas, including reducing the budget for the police department and redirecting those funds to violence prevention programs; decriminalizing sex work; coupling mental health clinicians with police officers responding to calls; eliminating police from public schools while increasing mental health services; and creating a hotline for those in distress.

Truth be told, none of these ideas is new. Many of them have been floated in other public forums over the last several months. Some proposals already have been incorporated into existing law. For example, the District currently has a program that couples police with mental health specialists — a pre-arrest diversion program that involves the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD), the Department of Human Services (DHS) and the Department of Behavioral Health (DBH). The council reduced MPD's 2021 budget from the mayor's proposal while providing $9 million for the expansion of violence prevention programs managed by the Office of the Attorney General and the Office of Neighborhood Safety and Engagement. In 2018, Mayor Muriel Bowser worked with the legislature to expand, albeit incrementally, mental health services in DC Public Schools. Bowser administration officials report that at least $23 million has been budgeted to provide mental health services to 161 schools.

Barbara Bazron, DBH's executive director, ticked off a half dozen programs and improvements her agency has implemented, including a 24-hour hotline (1-888-793-4357), virtual group counseling sessions, and telehealth visits that allow patients to use videoconferencing or their telephones. "The no-show rates went down substantially," she told me during an extensive interview last week. The agency also has provided urgent care services on site in Ward 8 while continuing to partner with organizations like the Wendt Center and Community Connections to address stress, grief and trauma.

"Our website is chock full of information for everyone," added Bazron, during our telephone conversation.

As I listened to testimony at last week's council roundtable, I wondered how many advocates knew about DBH's existing programs. I wondered, too, whether I was witnessing an organized campaign to help politically ambitious legislators expand their base using, among other things, animus toward the police.

The root cause of violence and crime in the District is complex and generational. It is mostly anchored in unresolved trauma. As should be obvious by now, that condition does not easily yield to well-orchestrated sloganeering or easy fixes.

Almost everyone, including media organizations like the Washington Post editorial board, has agreed community and gun violence is a public health issue. Nothing new there. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention first made that declaration in the late 1970s.

For more than 40 years, groups of people have called for cities marked by significant violence to deploy a public health approach. What is the infrastructure for such an action plan?

There was much talk during the council hearing about the community. I was struck by how few people spoke specifically about family as a crime prevention entity.

While there are some exceptions, family most often can be the bulwark against nearly every social problem. Whether we are talking about the state of black males, juvenile incarceration, substance abuse or teen pregnancy, a strong, attentive and nurturing family is the ultimate antidote. Advocates can organize dozens of protests — and they have — aimed at “reimagining” public safety. However, without a sustained powerful focus on family, issues of crime and violence are unlikely to be significantly altered.

“Approaching violent crime as a public health crisis means understanding and treating the harm trauma does among families. That should include immediate and ongoing counseling services, building relationships with at-risk individuals through violence interruption efforts, and helping families make ends meet in the first place,” Allen said via an email sent by his spokesperson.

Sounds good — except the city seems stuck in a passive or reactive posture.

Even before the coronavirus pandemic, there were tens of thousands of fragile families in DC. They were already grappling with unresolved, generational trauma exacerbated by extreme poverty or horrific domestic violence — adult against adult and adult against children.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has cited over the past year an increase in people displaying signs of clinical anxiety and depression. While Congress has placed $4.25 billion for mental health and addiction issues in the recently approved coronavirus stimulus package, experts say it is not nearly enough to keep up with the growing demands for help.

Last week, my friend and former colleague Colbert King wrote in his Washington Post column that a significant amount of the violence in DC is being caused by youth; they are both perpetrators and victims. He’s right.

Trauma experts and others I have spoken with previously, including DC Attorney General Karl Racine, have noted that “hurt people hurt people.” Consequently, the level of youth involvement in crime, their participation in gangs and their use of guns shouldn’t surprise anyone.

They are indisputable testimony of trauma hiding in plain sight, and perhaps affirmation of the CDC findings.

A public health approach might be to assess the level of trauma, the same way the city is testing for the presence of the coronavirus. Officials might try to figure out how best to treat it, tracing its contagion inside families and in the community where those families live and operate. They might also ask themselves the obvious question: Has the rate of violence or trauma increased during the past nine months as a result of the pandemic and pandemic-related conditions?

Sadly, none of that is happening.

To be fair, DBH has provided early childhood assessment and consultations, mostly through child care centers. It provides some assistance to teens and young adults caught in the grip of alcohol or drug abuse that is affecting their emotional and mental health behaviors. And when families find they need help, they can turn to existing community service organizations.

Those families must reach out, however, in order for the government to respond. That places yet another burden on people already burdened by trauma.

The Bowser administration hasn't gone on the hunt to address decades of unresolved trauma. There is no systematic, citywide trauma assessment program that reaches out to a broad segment of the population. It also appears that no one in the government is analyzing the relationship between the coronavirus pandemic, violence and trauma — despite the fact that national studies have found a rise in mental health issues, including suicides.

“We haven't done any research on the causal relationship,” Bazron told me when I asked about all of this.

In response to my questions, Bazron said DBH has a “large provider network in all eight wards. They are known to the community and the community knows them.

“Lots of things have been put in place to address specific COVID-related issues,” continued Bazron. “We really think the District is a model.”

With all due respect, I don't agree with that evaluation, especially around addressing mental health needs and providing consistent trauma-related care.

The DC government knows the specific locations of fragile families. Officials know who receives Aid to Families with Dependent Children, for example. They know who is receiving housing assistance and Medicaid. They know what parents are incarcerated, possibly leaving behind grandparents to step into the child-rearing role.

While I am no expert, couldn't all of this firsthand knowledge be used to fashion a more aggressive plan that isn't just focused on violence interrupters or doesn't just blame the police? Couldn't it be used to develop a healing strategy — one aimed at helping children currently being traumatized? Couldn't that plan also help those suffering the impact of unresolved trauma, including adults whose pain carried from childhood has misdirected their lives?

The coronavirus pandemic presents a unique opportunity. Could DC use its testing sites to begin a citywide assessment of its residents experiencing trauma or living in trauma-inducing environments? Could it use the reopening of schools as an occasion to determine the effects of the pandemic on the emotional and mental health of students and their families? Could the city send a cadre of medical students or others to homes to gather such information?

It's not too late for elected officials and others to chart a more comprehensive course of action. One section of the Omnibus Public Safety and Justice Amendment Act of 2020, which Allen ushered through the council, may be a hopeful step forward. I am no fan of much of the legislation, which won final approval Dec. 15, but I am excited about its data-sharing component.

Speaking at the roundtable, Misty Thomas, executive director of the nonprofit Council for Court Excellence, offered that "data sharing is extremely limited" at present. She said agencies operate in "real silos" and called on the council to "break down the silo system."

Making adjustments in that area would "really improve the ability to serve people in the community," added Thomas. I share her sentiment — although it appears that the impetus for the inclusion of the data sharing in the omnibus legislation was the bureaucratic need for the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council to complete a report.

Allen said in his email response to my questions that the first report "will be an ongoing, bi-annual look at the causes of violent crime for young offenders. Getting more information [has] always helped shape and inform our policy decisions and I would expect this data to be as instructive."

What the government does with that data will demonstrate its intentions. Will it be satisfied with playing the blame game? Will it continue to fixate on symptoms, or will it get serious about addressing the root cause of violence, which begins with a focus on families — fragile, traumatized families?

There is no time for lollygagging. Lives are at stake.

Mike,

Good afternoon.

I just want to quickly send over 9 resumes for the Attorney Advisor position.

There were 29 total applicants but I have prescreened and just sending you 9.

Also, I pulled their salary requirements for future reference. Most are within our range except for two, and one of them 2-534(a)(2) know in previous agencies.

A few of them based on experience might be better suited as an LS-12 instead.

Please let me know who you wish to interview.

Importance: High

Good morning:

Time entry and approvals will be due on Wednesday, December 30, 2020 by noon. Please continue to submit absence notices in PeopleSoft for ALL scheduled and unscheduled leave requests. Don't forget to add a line for Christmas and the New Years Holiday. If you are going to be on leave, please make sure that your timekeeping responsibilities have been completed beforehand.

COVID Related Tasks: Each task should be entered in whole hours increments on a separate line on your timesheet. You must also enter detailed comments for each task by date. Here is a short video that explains this process:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vsmNPr2gGn4&feature=emb\_title

New Employees: To enter your time, please go to start.dc.gov and click on PeopleSoft (from home) or simply type ess.dc.gov. The attached guidance from DCHR should help you with completing your time while we are on telework. Please let me know if you have any questions.

MANAGERS: Please make that time submission and approval dates are met to prevent delays with pay and supplemental requests.

OPRS may process payroll earlier than indicated on the pay calendar during this time, so it is important that everyone adheres to the due date. If things should change regarding timekeeping, further guidance will be provided.

Thank you and stay safe.

dchr GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
MURIEL BOWSER, MAYOR

MEMORANDUM

TO: District Employees
FROM: Ventris C. Gibson, Director, Department of Human Resources
DATE: Saturday, March 28, 2020
SUBJECT: Timekeeping During the COVID-19 Emergency

The District government recognizes that many employees are going above and beyond the call of duty by quickly adapting to new rules, policies, and procedures during the coronavirus (COVID-19) public health emergency. The federal government has pledged to give local jurisdictions boosts in funding to address the pandemic. To receive these funds, the District government needs your help to accurately keep a record of all coronavirus-related efforts and activities. Employees should use the new PeopleSoft "Task" feature to track any work they perform in support of the District's response to the public health emergency.

HOW SHOULD I CODE MY TIME?

How do I code my time if I am working from home?

If you are working from home, you should code your time in PeopleSoft as Telework (Situational) – STTW.

How do I code my time for hours I report to a duty station?

If your work requires you to physically report to a duty station, you should code your time in PeopleSoft as you normally would. For most employees, this code should be Regular Pay – REG.

What if I work overtime?

If you are a union employee, your overtime will be added automatically. If you are a non-union employee covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), use Overtime for TimeKeepers – OT to record all overtime hours. If you are exempt from FLSA, use Exempt Time Off Earned - ETE. Not all employees are eligible for overtime. Please see our guidance on Overtime for more information.

What if my work is related to the COVID emergency?

If you are conducting work related to COVID, whether teleworking, reporting for duty, or working overtime, you should categorize that time as a COVID Task. To find out if the work you are doing is related to COVID-19 see issuance I-2020-7, COVID-19 Timekeeping for more details.

Additional Information

Should you have any questions related to task tracking, please send an email to: eoc.finadsec@dc.gov and ensure that "COVID 19 Task Tracking" is in the subject line for routing purposes.

Straight from The Well

Saturday, December 26, 2020

Dear Reader,

Before we dive in to our most read articles, we just wanted to take a moment to thank you for being such a valued member of the community we are building.

The Well News was conceived to help break through the hostile rhetoric and focus on issues that are overlooked far too often. There are an untold number of leaders across this country who are working hard to safeguard our future with a sensible and pragmatic approach. Unfortunately, they struggle to communicate with Americans who are continuously bombarded by more extreme viewpoints.

Our journey began in 2018 to bring you coverage of issues, ideas and leaders that are the foundation of progress and stability in our country. We are so grateful to have you on our side. As we enjoy the holiday season, we hope you know how much we appreciate your support in all that we do.

2021 is going to be an important year for all of us and we want to reach as many people as possible. If you support sensible and pragmatic governing, we would be grateful for you sharing The Well News with family and friends.

Thank you again, happy holidays and see you in the New Year!

- The Well News Team

The Senate has left town for its annual Memorial Day recess with no agreement in sight on a fourth coronavirus economic relief bill and a schedule that suggests a new stimulus won't be done until July. Last week, the House passed the $3 trillion Heroes Act.
